Prosperity Loan Indorsed Here

Mine Strikers Under Eyes of State Troops

Today

Banks and Shoestrings.
Arabs Own the Wall.
Russia Goes Whaling.
Mr. Coolidge Will Rest.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

BANK MERGERS in Chicago show that some big-sized financial gentlemen mean to take care of weak sisters and avoid trouble whenever it is possible. Gen. Dawes; Mr. Traylor, of the First National Bank of Chicago; George M. Reynolds, of the Continental Illinois National Bank, are entitled to thanks.

But some way should be found to impress on so-called financiers that lending money on a shoestring, especially when it isn't a good shoestring, has its penalties.

THE ENGLISH commission ruling the Holy Land decides that the "Wailing Wall," sacred to the ancient sorrows of the Jews, is the absolute property of the Arabs. The commission decides, however, that the Jews must be allowed to go there and wail, without interference.

Historical advisers say that the commission could not decide otherwise, since the Arabs have been in possession of the Holy Land for some 700 years, ever since they established the fact that crusades, like other wars, do not pay and cannot be waged profitably.

IF RUSSIA will kindly pause and let "conservative business and finance" get their respectable breaths, business and finance will be much obliged.

Russia is now going into the whaling business, has ordered special whaling ships, and will develop new whaling territory. That is good news for our soap makers, bad news for the whales.

THE WORST of it is that, while this country, pointing to Russia, says, "I wouldn't be seen playing with that bad little boy," other countries do play with Russia. For example, the Norwegian government encourages its citizens to sell goods to Russia and guarantees 75 per cent of all bills owed by Russia. Other countries do the same.

IF A NORWEGIAN sells $100 worth of goods to Russia and doesn't get his money, his own government will pay him $75, and, as he certainly tacks on $25 profit, he can't lose, and keeps his business going.

OUR GOVERNMENT is too pure for that. We prefer to send our public representatives lallygagging around Europe, talking about sweet peace, how we love everybody, and how we all ought to give up war. We might better attend to our own business and develop it.

MR. COOLIDGE, who has been writing a short article daily, except Sundays, for a year, will stop in July and rest two months. He said in one of his articles:

"The brains of the country need relaxation and refreshment more than ever this season."

MANY EDITORS, who have been writing every day, Sundays included, for 10, 20, 30, 40 years or more, will congratulate Mr. Coolidge on his wise decision, and wish they could imitate it.

MR. COOLIDGE'S articles, appearing in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, the Chicago Herald-Examiner, the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, and other newspapers throughout the country, have been forceful, sound and useful, and it is good news that he will resume writing them in the fall.

PARIS IS HAVING a colonial exposition, and once more the Eiffel Tower is taxed to its capacity with visitors.

The French, conservative, at first would only go to the first landing, 190 feet toward the clouds. A few went to the 384 height, few dared brave the third platform, 905 feet high. Now nearly all go to the top, and look over the beautiful city.

SOMETHING OF the fish and something of the bird makes us want to go to the bottom of the sea, and to high places. And we go.

Once "captive balloons" fastened to the earth with a rope were popular. Sarah Bernhardt went up in one, and was well advertised.

FORMER GOV. SMITH'S Empire State Building in New York, considerably higher than the Eiffel Tower, actually takes in a thousand dollars a day from visitors to the top.

In a little while school children will take their "geography lesson" going around the world six miles up and think nothing of it.

CONGRESSMEN BACK HEARST PROPOSAL

Kelly Declares Crisis Equals War Period; Erk, Estep And Campbell for Plan

Four of the five Allegheny County Congressman who were available today had declared for the Hearst prosperity loan program to relieve the present financial depression.

Congressmen Clyde Kelly, Harry A. Estep, Guy E. Campbell and Edmund F. Erk issued statements in favor of the proposition. Kelly pointed out that the country today is in just as great danger as when, in 1917, Congress appropriated $7,000,000,000 outright for preparation in the early days of the World War.

BOND ISSUE PROPOSED

The Hearst prosperity loan program was outlined in a radio address by William Randolph Hearst in a radio address June 2.

It proposed the immediate expenditure of $5,000,000,000 for employment in a program of public improvements which might include projects such as waterways, flood control, highway and power conservation. The money, it proposed, would be raised by a federal bond issue.

PLAN CALLED EXCELLENT

Indorsements were as follows:

Congressman Kelly:

"I think we ought to show the world that the resources of the United States are pledged to meet this dangerous depression. The menace to the country today is just as great as it was in the early days of the war, in 1917, when we appropriated $7,000,000,000 for preparation for war. I shall wholeheartedly support using the power of government to relieve the depression. The Hearst prosperity loan program is an excellent thing."

Congressman Campbell:

"The prosperity loan is the progressive thing to do. Mr.

HARRISBURG, June 9.—(AP.)—Dismissal of Harry S. Helms, of Philadelphia, as state director of publications was announced today by Secretary of Property and Supplies James F. Malone.

DUNN PROTESTS TAX INCREASE

A warning to city administrators that Pittsburgh will not tolerate further increase in taxes was made today by Thomas A. Dunn, president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, in an address before the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board.

Dunn told realtors that despite the present business slump city authorities are paying no heed to sound business practices and that Council conforms Pittsburgh's income to its expenses by one system—raising taxes and water rents.

Councilman Robert Garland, called on by President Roy R. Cappe, declared he had not voted for pay raises given some city officials last year when many undeserving shirkers profited. He advised the realtors to go before Council and demand that no more pay raises be given in times of depression.

Lost Fingers Save Guerin From Prison

'Scrapping' of Marines Forecast by Butler

BEVERLY, Mass., June 9.—(INS.)—That the "Devil Dogs" will soon be abolished, was the prediction today of Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler.

On the eve of his retirement from active service, the fiery chief of Uncle Sam's "Leathernecks" declared that the Marines may soon be abolished as a unit of the nation's fighting forces, in an address before the Beverly Chamber of Commerce last night.

Gen. Butler refused to enlarge upon his remarks, but some members of his audience interpreted his remarks as meaning the recently announced policy of economy toward the Navy Department by President Hoover, might result in the "scrapping" of the Marines.

Calls on Kerr, Waldschmidt And Dunlap for Reports; New Witnesses Summoned

City Council today decided to find out for itself just what this auditing of the City Supplies Bureau is about.

Although the report of Price, Waterhouse & Co., which made an audit of the bureau's affairs for the city, was read to Council yesterday—in its full text—the Councilmen, sitting this afternoon as the Committee on Finance, voted to await reports which they requested from City Controller James P. Kerr, City Solicitor Charles P. Waldschmidt and W. R. Dunlap, new superintendent of the Supplies Bureau, before further considering the irregularities disclosed in yesterday's reading.

MORE WITNESSES

Between 15 and 20 more subpenas are to be issued for witnesses to appear before the grand jury investigating affairs of the Department of City Supplies as a result of the Price, Waterhouse & Co. audit of the bureau's affairs, was disclosed today.

Assistant District Attorney George F. P. Langfitt and Special Prosecutor Earl F. Reed were in conference this afternoon to prepare the list of those subpenaed. Reed said:

"The information in the Price, Waterhouse & Co. audit coincides with much of that uncovered for the Citizens' Committee by Main & Co. in their audit. We have a large amount of additional data which we believe will prove invaluable in the prosecution."

An outstanding feature of the Price, Waterhouse & Co. report of the City Department of Supplies is its finding that Mayview Hospital is without adequate accounting records and with insufficient safeguards to prevent merchandise from being taken from stock improperly.

The auditors found no perpetual inventory records are being maintained and no periodic checks being made on actual supplies. In addition to the main storeroom, the report states, there are 25 points in which reserve supplies are kept in which there is little or no accounting.

It is also found that no accurate

Jewish Chiefs Score Wailing Wall Decree

JERUSALEM, June 9.—(AP.)—At meetings of the Jewish Agency executive committee and the chief rabbinate today recommendations published yesterday at London by the Wailing Wall commission were described as not completely satisfying to Jewish aspirations and giving no ground for rejoicing.

The Jews will accept the verdict; it was said, since it allows of no appeal, although prohibition of the use of the Torah scrolls at the wall on Saturday is a "great disappointment."

Mussolini's Answer To Vatican Protests Invites Peace Moves

Government's Reply To Pope Held Conciliatory

ROME, June 9.—(AP.)—The Italian government today sent to Vatican City a reply to two notes of protest filed by Pope Pius against dissolution of Catholic clubs for laymen and anti-Catholic demonstrations of the past two weeks.

The document was said to be conciliatory in tone.

DELIVERED BY ENVOY

It was delivered by Count de Vecchi, the Italian ambassador, to Cardinal Pacelli, the papal secretary of state. Archbishop Borgangini Duca, papal nuncio, met the ambassador at the Vatican and the three statesmen conferred for more than an hour.

Italy's reply to the Pope was said to include answers to several points raised by the Vatican regarding insults to the Pontiff and demanding punishment of those guilty, reparations for alleged violation of extra-territoriality and an explanation for the closing of the Catholic clubs.

TERMS UNDISCLOSED

Its exact terms were not disclosed but the intimation that its tone was one of conciliation came from a thoroughly responsible source.

It could not be learned immediately, however, whether it constituted an apology to the Vatican.

GUARD FORCE INCREASED IN FEAR OF UPRISING

Guns Held Ready to Repel Attacks at Mines; Cain Bars Women From Rallies

While extra cordons of guards were placed about salient mines in the Western Pennsylvania strie zone today as fears of a recurrence of violence grew, Maj. Lynn Adams, superintendent of the Pennsylvania state police, arrived in the district to make a personal "inspection of conditions."

Maj. Adams planned to return to Harrisburg tonight and report to the executive office tomorrow, thus assuring Gov. Gifford Pinchot of a first-hand picture of the situation.

Sheriff Robert S. Cain issued an edict barring women and children in demonstration in the strike area.

All demonstrations will be halted, Sheriff Cain said, if his order is not obeyed.

MORE DEPUTIES HIRED

Twenty additional deputy sheriffs were sworn in by Sheriff J. A. Seaman, of Washington County, this morning, bringing the total number of special officers to 140. Sheriff Seaman said:

"I do not believe that the trouble has really started. While all the districts of the county are quiet today, I feel that much trouble is brewing."

TRUCK STONED

Except for the stoning of a truck driver of the Valley Camp Coal Company mine at Kinloch by strikers on picket duty along the Greensburg highway, there were no disorders. Half a dozen stones were hurled at the driver as he sped past the strikers, but he escaped uninjured.

Allegheny County deputy sheriffs returning to Pittsburgh from a tour of the mine region, reported conditions quiet. They said that they had aided in the organization of a parade of 150 miners who marched in Butler pike in the vicinity of the Wildwood mine of the Butler Coal and Coke Company.

Strikers numbering 750 were reported to have staged a demonstration without disorder at Library, according to the returning deputies. One man was reported

NO COAL POLICE AFTER JULY 1

HARRISBURG, June 9.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot today reiterated his announced intention of revoking by July 1, the commissions of coal and iron policemen now in service. Sheriffs and the state police will be required to cope with disturbances in strike areas, Gov. Pinchot said:

"My platform, which I repeated all over Pennsylvania, was to abolish the coal and iron police, and I said specifically that no matter what the action of the Legislature, there would not remain a single coal and iron policeman after July 1. That pledge will be carried out to the letter. Orders to that effect were issued long ago."

At the present time, there were approximately 1,050 commissions in force.

After July 1, the only property guards that can be employed will be watchmen. They will have police power within the confines of the property they guard, the Governor says.

HEARST PLEA FOR HIGH WAGES BACKED BY RAIL UNIONS

FIGHT AGAINST PAY CUTTING INDORSED

$5,000,000,000 Prosperity Loan Plan Supported in Paper of Brotherhoods

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—William Randolph Hearst's recent radio broadcast in favor of high wage standards and a $5,000,000,000 prosperity loan won high commendation today from Labor, official organ of the railroad brotherhoods.

The views of the publisher were praised in a front-page feature article over a column long, accompanied by a picture of Mr. Hearst and a pugent paragraph from Brisbane urging relief for the unemployed.

Mr. Hearst was particularly indorsed by labor for his vigorous condemnation of wage cutting and his plea for continuing the American standard of living.

WARNING CITED

Asserting that wage slashing is being attempted in many industries, Labor said:

"The burden of resisting this movement has fallen upon organized labor, but for once it is not compelled to fight a lone hand. On the contrary, it is receiving wonderful support from several sources, and the stand taken by many influential newspapers is one of the most gratifying and significant developments of a troubled economic era.

"Last week William Randolph Hearst, in a radio hook-up, swung into line in fine shape.

"The publisher predicted that that if employers persisted in their 'insane policy' of lowering American living standards, trouble of the most serious character may be expected. He called for an immediate expenditure of $5,000,000,000 on public works."

BUYING KEY TO BOOM

Labor quoted and placed emphasis on the following extracts from Mr. Hearst's speech:

"The basis of prosperity is the ability of the public to buy. In other words, prosperity is based on the purchasing power of the public. When the public buys from the stores, the stores buy from the factories, the factories buy the raw materials produced by the farm and the mines.

"All these forms of activity employ labor, and the money circulates with profit to all classes."

Labor also indorsed Mr. Hearst's assertion that labor should have been given a greater share of the increased profits of industry brought about by the use of machinery. The paper added:

"Prosperity, according to the publisher, cannot be recovered in foreign markets. He protested against the sending of money to Europe as tending to 'increase foreign competition and diminish American prosperity.'"

CONGRESSMEN URGE LOAN

Hearst is sensing the thought of all the people. I think he is on the right track. If the Appropriations Committee recommends it to the House, I'll support it."

ESTEP APPROVES

Congressman Estep:

"The plan of Hr. Hearst to anticipate public improvements funded by large government borrowings meets with my approval. It is designed to have a far-reaching influence in the existing economic depression and challenges the though of the nation.

"The principle of anticipating improvements as a relief measure, advocated by him, has been acknowledged by appropriations of millions of dollars during the past session of Congress.

"The extent of expenditures under this plan, whether they may aggregate $5,000,000,000 or not, depends upon the number and the rapidity of preparation of well-studied and worthy projects. Certainly I am in favor of advancing work on any approved project, whether it is planned for five years from the present, so immediate employment may be given as many as possible of those affected by the depression.

WOULD HASTEN REPAYMENT

"This situation of prosperity would hasten the period when the loans consequent upon this scheme might be repaid. The plan obviates the dole, widely opposed, and provides employment for idle funds, as well as for idle and deserving workmen, for the puhblic good.

"I am not aware of any definite steps in the plan, but I have in mind a comprehensive projects, long proposed and agitated, which it might properly encompass. That is the construction of a 60-foot natidnal highway from coast to coast. This could be planned so that work on it in every state through which it passed could be inaugurated simultaneously with local labor."

ERK CITES CANAL PLAN

Representative Erk:

"Congress might well adopt some such program as that urged by Mr. Hearst, applying it to authorized public works which have not yet been given funds. The program might also extend to other public works such as the proposed waterway from Pittsburgh to the Great Lakes, which have not yet been authorized, but which are certain to be given favorable consideration in time.

"There are enough government projects pending and already authorized by Congress to require a government expenditure of upwards of $2,000,000,000. These projects include such items as the Boulder Dam and the various public buildings authorized for the country. We might as well spend this money now rather than wait and spread it out over a period of years. Other projects in the same category are the numerous rivers and harbors improvements contemplated in existing congressional legislation.

"If we can confine the proposed Hearst program to projects of this kind I am thoroughly in favor of its enactment. Congress might well take a far-sighted view of things and appropriate money for those added projects, such as the long agitated waterway from Pittsburgh to the Lakes now, without further delay."

Answering attacks on industry, Mr. Jones charged that the country's political institutions had become one of the greatest burdens taxpayers had to bear.

Banker Urges U. S. Hasten Hearst Prosperity Plan

LOS ANGELES, June 9.—(Universal.)—N. R. Feltes, a Chicago investment broker and formerly a director and treasurer of the Studebaker Corporation, after his arrival today declared:

"Prominent financial men in New York and other Eastern centers are strongly impressed with William Randolph Hearst's prosperity plan and it has been most favorably received and discussed.

"The Hearst plan had a psychological effect upon the financial circles of the nation and the country at large. Even municipalities have taken a deep interest in it.

"I don't know how many billions it will require, but the plan should be put into effect at the earliest possible moment. The plan has already had a stabilizing effect and has stimulated the country.

"The national government should be the unit that should start the return of prosperity, or at least make one move, and here is its chance."

Feltes believes the Hearst plan of an excise tax to pay the bonds for the proposed building program throughout the nation is both "sound" and "the solution."

$50,000 GIVEN BLAST VICTIM IN MUNHALL

Equitable Gas Co. Loses Suit Over Death of Wife, Serious Injury to Man

A verdict of $50,000 for the death of his wife and injuries received by himself was awarded George E. Thirkell, 45, of Greenfield, by a jury in Common Pleas Court today.

The verdict was returned against the Equitable Gas Company and was based on the Munhall Postoffice explosion of December, 1929. Thirkell lived over the postoffice then.

Thirkell contended he could speak only in a whisper since the explosion.

The jury refused to return a verdict against the Munhall estate, also a defendant.

This was said to be the second largest damage verdict given an individual here. The largest, $102,000, was returned against the Mellon interests in favor of Mary G. Hahn, North Side, injured by a hammer which fell from the Mellon-owned Pittsburgher Hotel.

Thirkell was hanging a chandelier in his apartment when the explosion, blamed on a gas leak, rocked the building, killing his wife and five others. He testified later:

"I heard kind of a noise; the floor came up and then something came down on me, and when I came to I was out on the street."

Thirkell, believed to have lost his voice, recovered partly under the instruction of two nurses in a hospital.

His is the second verdict handed down thus far in the explosion. Martin King, 22, of Homestead, has been awarded a $25,000 verdict against the gas company.

COUNCIL SEEKS MORE DATA

record is kept of the gasoline used at the Mayview garage.

The Mayview coal mine, which has often attracted the attention of Council, at budget time because of the expense of operation, furnished the auditors a case of where the city paid more than double the market value for cross ties. Ties were purchased from a lone bidder through the Department of Supplies for 55 cents each. Similar ties were quoted at 20 cents each, the auditors declare.

That the director of the supplies bureau lacked freedom to hire and dismiss members of his staff was disclosed, the report says, and political patronage was seen as interfering with the work.

Disclosures that city funds were declared to have been squandered are included in the lengthy report, which covers the spending of $2,390,325 in 1930.

The supplies bureau, it charges, was not administered in an efficient and business-like manner, the report states; many contracts not conforming with legal requirements and there were not proper written explanations in the records.

MAYOR CRITICIZED

Attention is called in the report to the law that all contracts must be let by the Mayor and the head of the proper department and it was declared there is no evidence that the Mayor reviewed or approved the awards.

Auditors after checking the records declare they believe last July the city paid for a large amount of high-test gasoline and probably received motor grade. A reduction in tax on July 1, 1930, was not taken advantage of by the city, they said, and 4,600 gallons were paid for without the reduction.

No mileage record is kept either on tires or automobiles, it was found. The inventory shows, according to the report, 167 unused tires which have been accumulating since 1928. There is nothing to show that the city is not being overcharged for spare parts and motor supplies, the report said.

The report stresses the necessity of encouraging more bidding on city contracts. It is suggested a more representative class of venders be included in the list to whom inquiries are sent.

MINE RIOT ZONE UNDER GUARD

ORDERS POSTED

Sheriff Cain's orders to strikers today banning women and children from participating in the demonstrations were distributed by deputy sheriffs in all parts of the county. Deputy sheriffs said in the demonstrations at Wildwood and Library there were no women and children. Nor were any women employed as pickets who patroled highways in the vicinity of the Newfield mine of the Union Collieries in Penn Township today, they declared.

The prevailing quiet was described as a "lull before the storm" by mine operators and authorities, who mobilized squads of state troopers, armed deputy sheriffs and coal company police before anticipated points fo attack. Half a dozen of the larger mines were guarded heavily. They were considered the likely skirmish points of the day following yesterday's turbulent outburst of defiance from several thousand strikers.

Extra squads of troopers were dispatched at daybreak to the Lincoln Hill mine of the Lincoln Coal Gas Company; Richeyville mine of the Jones & Laughlin interests; the Bethlehem Steel Company's mines at Marianna and Ellsworth; Francis mine at Burgettstown; Westland mine of the Pittsburgh Coal Company and the Henderson mine at Hendersonville. A demonstration is expected at Ellsworth when the mine opens.

Few miners appeared on the highways and streets of the small mining communities until after daybreak. In some of the groups it was learned that orders had come down from their leaders that there would be no demonstrations today.

Vincent Kemenovich, secretary of the strike committee of the National Miners' Union, addressed several hundred men and women in the Ellsworth district following yesterday's disorders and urged his listeners to disregard Sheriff Seaman's proclamation forbidding gatherings of three or more persons. State police stood guard on the fringes of the meeting, but made no arrests.

Hoover Cabinet Members Called 'Land Squatters'

MADISON, Va., June 9.—(INS.)—Members of President Hoover's cabinet and federal government were characterized at condemnation proceedings here as literally a bunch of "land squatters." Officials of the Madison Timber Corporation, subsidiary of the Ward Rue Lumber Company, owners of the land on which the cabinet camp is erected, testified the tract was seized without permission and blocked from them by a battalion of Marines—the President's horses and the President's men.

The cabinet camp is located in the Blue Ridge Mountains about a mile from President Hoover's camp and only those invited to the latter are allowed to pass the Marine guard.

The lumber company is demanding $20,000 for the value of the buildings erected in the cabinet camp. C. D. Rue, vice president and general manager of the two companies, testified the camp was built without permission of the owners. Matthew L. Rue, president of the companies, also declared that the ground for the camp of the marines who guard the Hoover camp was seized without permissic and occupied about a year before a lease was sought and obtained.

PROBE ORDERED IN ATTACK BY COAL POLICE

Victim Freed, But Must Pay Costs; Father and Son Tell of Row Near Mine

Acting District Attorney George F. P. Langfitt today ordered an investigation into the alleged brutality used by coal and iron police Sunday in arresting James Cushey, 61, and his son, Robert, 27, Hackett miners. Langfitt said:

"I have been informed of the alleged brutality of the coal and iron police and I have ordered Chief County Detective George W. Murren to detail detectives to make a complete investigation of the case."

The acting district attorney did not disclose what his plans would be following the investigation.

Still maintaining that he was beaten and dragged from his automobile on a public highway near Montour Mine 10 by a deputy sheriff and coal and iron police, the younger Cushey was adjudged guilty and ordered to pay the costs of prosecution when arraigned before Justice of the Peace J. M. O'Rourke, of Broughton, last night. The justice discharged his father on the disorderly conduct charge but ordered the son to pay the $6.95 costs.

In addition to the disorderly conduct charges they also were arraigned on charges of assault, interfering with an officer and with resisting arrest. Decision was reserved until Monday night on the other charges. The pair was arrested and the informations were made by John J. Kehoe, a deputy sheriff in charge of the mine guards.

Deputy Kehoe testified that he and William Schaffer, a coal and iron policeman, were seated in an automobile on the highway near the mine, when a machine containing James Cushey, his sons, Robert and William, and Howard Aiken, passed. Robert Cushey, Kehoe testified, cursed the officers.

Miners who walked out of the Crescent mine at Daisytown Saturday were holding an indignation meeting today following the return to work of 105 of the 900 men who struck at the call of the insurgent mine organization. Between 200 and 250 of the strikers attended the meeting.

BANKER'S LOAN HELD FRAUD

UNIONTOWN, Pa., June 9.—That Linford F. Ruth, 73, of Washington, former president of the Title and Trust Company of Western Pennsylvania, of Connellsville, now defunct, loaned $60,000 on property that was virtually worthless, was alleged by Special Prosecutor A. E. Jones, here today. Ruth, on trial charge with misapplication, benefitted personally, Jones charged.

According to Jones, after the State Banking Department had forced Ruth to lift the mortgage, it was again put back into the bank as security and credited to the Waynesburg Coal Company, of which Ruth was president. Checks on this amount, Jones charged, went to pay notes of the Waynesburg Coal Company and other concerns and individuals. Jones further charged that one check paid notes for J. N. Ruth, son of the defendant.

The mortgage was on 26 acres of coal land in Greene County, which the Waynesburg company owns outright.

POLICE BAFFLED BY MYSTERY DROWNING OF N. Y. HEIRESS

BRUISED BODY FOUND ON BEACH

Greenwich Village Beauty Guarded Many Secrets; Murder Clues Being Sought

By DAVID P. SENTNER
International News Service.

NEW YORK, June 9.—Starr Faithfull, 25-year-old Greenwich Village beauty and adopted daughter of a wealthy family, was found drowned—and nobody knows why.

Starr had secrets and she didn't talk about them. She was always making notes for the stories she was going to write.

Her first and last story was published today—a mystery story.

Her slim body was washed up at Long Branch, Long Island. Several of the garments which she was wearing when she left her home last Friday were missing. There were some bruises on the body.

Inspector Harold R. King, chief of Nassau County detectives, said today:

"The thing that we want to determine is what caused the drowning. We haven't the slightest clue to the circumstances as yet."

Dr. Otto Schultze, who conducted the autopsy, said that while the girl had been drowned, the bruises warranted investigation.

There were three theories:

Starr might have been attacked and thrown into the ocean.

Starr, who had been brooding recently, might have committed suicide.

Starr might have accidentally fallen overboard from a vessel.

The girl's stepfather is Stanley Faithfull, 55, wealthy manufacturing chemist, of Boston and New York. Starr lived with her foster-parents and her step-sister, Tucker Faithfull, 19, at 12 St. Luke's place, only a few doors away from the home of Mayor James J. Walker.

The bill of Representative McClure, Allegheny, making changes to clarify the fiscal code of 1929, also was signed by the Governor.

RIOTS, KILLINGS GRIP SPAIN

MADRID, June 9.—(INS.)—After several weeks of quiet, Spain was plunged into new disorders today with serious strike riots at Bilboa and Oviedo and the slaying of a former monarchist mayor in the town of Solana.

The murdered politician was Fernando Pitado, who was trailed to his home and assassinated after he refused to turn over his office to his successful Republican rival in the recent town council elections.

The strike riot at Bilboa claimed the life of one man, supposedly a Communist, and resulted in injuries to several persons.

Coolidge Confident U. S. Will Overcome Slump

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., June 9.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Most of Europe is again laboring with difficult situations. Spain is passing through a revolution which has recently been accompanied by disorders directed against the property used for religious purposes. When it was hoped the ancient differences between the church and state in Italy had been composed permanently, new issues have arisen of an acute nature. Germany and England are struggling with economic problems. France is disturbed by the political consequences feared from the proposed German and Austrian customs union. An uncertain Russia is always in the background.

Mr. Coolidge

While we should be thankful for our own more happy condition we ought not to assume any attitude of superiority. We had our revolutionary period. We went through four years of a terrible internal war. We have periods of economic depression which no one adequately can explain or immediately relieve. At present our national treasury is running a very large deficit. It is no time for harsh words or hasty action, but for patience, sympathy and sober thought. Nor is there any reason for despair. There is a way out and it will be found. The forces of good are still superior to the forces of evil.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

WILKINS 'SUB' NEARING LANE OF STEAMERS

Engines Make Surprising Speed and Ship Rides Well Despite Heavy Sea

By CAPT. SIR HUBERT WILKINS
By Radio Via American News Corporation and Radio Marine Corporation.

ABOARD SUBMARINE NAUTILUS, at Sea, June 9.—With both engines turning over at surprising speed, we have put another 240 miles behind us.

Some time late today we should be at the turning point of our course.

We have been going east and now we will head more northerly on the usual track of steamers.

The seas are still sloppy and the watch on the bridge has little comfort. Below deck it is dry, but the rolling makes the work of stowing strenuous.

Capt. Sloan Danenhower is well pleased with the Nautilus as a sea boat—in fact she is probably more seaworthy than most vessels. With the trimming of the tanks she can be made to assume any angle.

Our escort came near to say hello. She soon will turn back and we will head out alone.

Pocket Raiders Could Be Slain, Judge Says

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—(AP.)—Citizens searched for liquor on the streets would, Judge Edwin O. Lewis said in Common Pleas Court, have "a perfect right" to shoot officers who attempt to find intoxicants in their pockets without a warrant.

Judge Lewis freed a man searched by Patrolman Frank Palozzi as the man came out of a speakeasy just before a raid. He asked the officer:

"What authority have you to search persons on the public highway? You have not a shadow of right to do such a thing and under such conditions a man would have a perfect right to shoot you."

HEALY RELATES KILLING STORY

DEDHAM, Mass., June 9.—(INS.)—Thomas S. Healey, 20, of Pittsburgh, testified today against his former companion, Paul Hurley, 20, of Roxbury, charged with the shooting to death last August of Patrolman Joseph B. O'Brien, of Brookline.

Healey had been indicted with Hurley on a murder charge, but the charge was nol prossed for lack of evidence.

Healey told how he and Hurley had tried to steal several automobiles when the officer asked what they were doing. He went on:

"He started to search me. Then Paul Hurley said 'Put up your hands or I'll shoot' and then I saw two flashes and the officer fell at my feet."

ARDMORE, Okla., June 9.—(INS.)—Formal charges of murder were filed today against Bill Guess and Cecil Crosby, deputy sheriffs, in connection with the slaying here early yesterday of two Mexican college students, one a nephew of President Ortiz Rubio, of Mexico.

HOOVER TAKES STAND AGAINST DEBT CUTS

President, Mellon, Stimson Reach Decision Opposing Any Further Reductions

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, June 9.—President Hoover, Secretary Mellon and Secretary Stimson today were understood to have taken a positive stand that there would be no further reduction or revision of the Allied war debts to the United States.

It was said at the White House that this government could not make its view stronger than in previous pronouncements declaring:

That the United States is not concerned with what Germany owes the Allies, but is vitally concerned in what the Allies owe to the United States.

In spite of this attitude, however, it is understood here that the forthcoming visits abroad of Mellon and Stimson are being largely awaited by European statesmen in the hope of securing some concessions from the United States.

BRUENING STARTS HOME

SOUTHAMPTON, England, June 9.—(AP.)—Chancellor Heinrich Breuning and Foreign Minister Julius Curtius, of Germany, started for home today, closing a visit which they hope will mark a new beginning of international co-operation.

While they talked with the heads of the present British government at Chequers over the week-end they invited Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald and Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson to come to Berlin soon and renew discussion of the economic problems of the two nations. The British statesmen accepted, but they have not decided when they will make the trip.

BERLIN, June 9.—(INS.)—An emphatic denial of reports that Germany would ask a moratorium on reparations within a week was made today by a spokesman for the German government.

ALLIES SCORED BY HOUGHTON

A serious warning that the world would not profit if Germany were to suffer a "complete breakdown" and a plea that all nations, not America alone, should share in the difficulties of a German delay in reparations payments, were the keynotes of an address which Alanson B. Houghton, former ambassador to Germany and the Court of St. James, delivered to 750 members of the graduating class of Carnegie Institute of Technology today.

Houghton said the argument that the allied nations are carrying a heavy burden of debts to the United States is "a misunderstanding of facts," explaining:

"They pay us nothing. They act merely as our transfer agents, and pay us out of the reparation payments they have forced Germany to pay them. The burden of our war debts rests directly upon the German people."

Houghton denied taht the present economic depression could be attributed to conditions caused by the war debt controversies and payments.

The former ambassador's statement is viewed with particular significance as it comes closely after the British-German debt discussion at Chequers and a few weeks before the proposed departure of Secretary of State Stimson and Secretary of the Treasury Mellon for Europe.

Motions to quash bribery indictments were made by Shermer, Thomas Ryan, Joseph Hannon, Attorney K. H. Powell and former Commissioner Griffith Jones. All were indicted by the jury after looking into relations between Thomas, former Traction Commissioner Harry Engle and public utilities.

Real Estate

The Florence H. Guthrie property, Woodlawn road, Fourteenth Ward, consisting of approximately four acres of land and the old Guthrie homestead, has been sold to Thomas J. Ingram, according to Feltyberger Brothers downtown realtors.

Ingram has razed the old house and barn, and will build a stone home of English architecture which will cover a frontage of practically 120 feet for the house proper. Feltyberger Brothers have been appointed agents for the sale of the new house. The price paid for the property was not made public.

Savings, building and loan associations, the 100-year-old home financing agencies of the United States, will make "Prepare for Prosperity" and "Prepare for the Next 100 Years" the dominant notes of their centennial convention this summer in Philadelphia, August 11 to 14.

The convention will be held under the auspices of the United States Building and Loan League and will be attended by delegates from every state in the Union.

The committee in charge of the affair consists of 200 building and loan leaders, headed by R. Holiby Myers, of Los Angeles, president of the United States Building and Loan League. The duties of the convention committee will include pre-convention activities in solidifying the delegations within the separate states as well as promotion of state enthusiasm during the Philadelphia sessions.

Pittsburgh will be represented on the committee by William E. Best, Charles Wilcox and Hubbs Weimer.

Applications for building permits follow:

Mine Store Looted Of $500 Merchandise

WASHINGTON, Pa., June 9.—Prowlers broke through a rear window at the Lincoln Hill Supply Company store at the Lincoln Hill mine, west of this city, and after ransacking the store, escaped with merchandise valued at $500.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

NEW YORK, June 9.

IT'S ONE of those strange little stories that could happen only in real life. The boy and girl have been married about four years. If they haven't been just as happy during the fourth year as they were during the first they have certainly been giving a couple of first-class imitations.

For the last year there has been but one little flaw in their mutual content. That is to say, the boy thought it little. The girl felt certain it was going to wreck their lives some day. For her husband, in keeping with the customs of modern youth under the prohibition regulations, had fallen into the habit of drinking more than was good for him.

He wasn't a drunkard, you understand. Not at all. It was simply that whenever there was a gathering of any kind everybody drank. So he drank, too. And there were gatherings at least three or four times a week.

The girl, of course, was along on these gatherings. But, aside from a cocktail or a glass of wine now and then, she didn't go for the stuff in a big way.

Many, many times she spoke to her husband about the situation.

"You're drinking too much, Jack," she told him. "Why don't you stop?"

His reply was always accompanied by a boyish grin.

"Aw, honey," he would generally say, "don't be an old henpeck. I'm going on the wagon soon. Sure. You know I don't care enough about the stuff to turn into a real stew. Don't you, baby?

"Kiss me, baby girl. From now on, I'll cut down on the stuff. No more than three drinks a night. You'll see, darling."

That conversation, with slight changes, was repeated three times a week. . . .

The boy drove his own car. He was that rarest of things in the city of New York, a good driver. He had the notion that he could drive safely while he was drunk.

His wife, never having driven a machine, seldom recognized the narrow escapes on their way home. But one night, after a minor smash-up, the light dawned on her. The next morning she spoke her piece.

"Jack," she said, "you worried me terribly last night. I can't make you stop drinking, but I'm going to promise you one thing. The next time you're tight and attempt to drive your car, I'm going home alone in a cab. We came pretty close to being killed last night. And I'm not going to be a fool just because you are."

"Okay, honey," he chirped. "But you don't have to worry about that. Starting tonight, I'm cutting down to three drinks a night. You'll see."

The following evening found the boy and girl at a party in Greenwich Village. The boy cut down to three drinks all right—three drinks an hour. By the time 2 o'clock in the morning rolled around Jack was swimming in alcohol.

The girl kept her word. She left the party and climbed into a taxi. The boy waited another hour, swallowed two more drinks and then decided to go home.

He staggered into his car and fumblingly inserted the key in the lock. Habit alone guided the shifting of his gears. Up Fifth avenue he went.

"Poor lil' wifie," he kept repeating to himself foolishly. "She thinks I can't drive. Thinks I'm drunk. Shilliest thing I ever heard. Won't go with me. Poor lil' wifie."

That funny thing called luck was still on his side. Two minutes later he pulled up in front of his home. It was little short of a miracle.

The doorman raced out. He clutched Jack by the arm and shook him. He spoke loudly—but the words came very dimly to the boy's ears.

"My God, sir," he cried, "I'm glad you're here. They want you in the Metropolitan Hospital right away. As quick as you can get there."

"Whadaya talking 'bout?" muttered the boy. "I'm all right. I don't need no hospital."

The doorman shook himself excitedly. He didn't know the irony of his words.

"For God's sake, sir," he cried, "sober up. It's your wife who's in the hospital. They say she's very seriously injured. The taxicab that was taking her home collided with another taxi." . . .

OVER AT the Ziegfeld Theater, where the good Dr. Ziegfeld is readying his new Follies, the huge cast is rehearsing enough material for four or five shows. The Follies will open in Pittsburgh next Monday night, and Flo's greatest difficulty is to choose the material that will strike the public most forcibly.

As is always the case in these gigantic revues, any number of sketch-writers, lyric-writers and composers can be found dashing around during rehearsals. Invariably their reactions are the same.

"A good idea, they murmur, "but the execution is wrong. That'll be cut in Pittsburgh."

Thus the line—"That'll be cut in Pittsburgh"—is an extremely familiar one around the theater these hectic days. I was sitting with Jack Murray, a highly talented young writer, the other afternoon when one of the chorines passed up the aisle. She seemed in acute distress.

Murray looked up.

"What's the matter, girlie?" he inquired.

"I don't know what to do," she cried. "My tonsils are bothering me terribly."

Murray sighed.

"Stop worrying," he murmured. "They'll be cut in Pittsburgh." . . .

NEW LOWER PRICES IN FASHION-THRIFT

The good values to which women have been accustomed in dresses at $10, $16.50 and $19.50, are now possible at new lower prices, as a result of the further decline in the basic costs of fabrics—in stores which are willing to pass these market advantages on to their customers.

The Horne Fashion-Thrift Section, the pioneer of all thrift and budget shops in Pittsburgh, is outstanding in this movement. It has revised its prices to give women and misses the earliest and greatest advantages of lowered costs, offering lovely summer frocks at three new prices.

Silks in white and pastel shades, including flat crepe, jacquards and rough-surfaced sports weaves, in the following types of dresses:

—Short-sleeve and sleeveless dresses, tailored models including those for active sports wear.

—Semi-dressy models, with capelets in lieu of sleeves, some with hand-embroidery or drawn-work.

In misses' and women's sizes, 14 to 44.

$10

—Youthful, short-sleeve frocks of embroidered georgette, in navy with white designs, white lingerie touches and red patent leather belts.

—Street frocks of prints in light and dark colors.

—Jacket-frocks and short-sleeve dresses of white and pastel silks, some with dark-color jackets. Also in prints with white grounds and bright patterns.

In women's sizes, small women's and misses' sizes.

..Horne's, Fashion-Thrift Section, Second Floor...

$12.75

—Jacket-frocks of light-color crepes and shantung, most of them washable.

Peer's Daughter To Wed, Learns Housework

LONDON, June 9.—(AP.)—The Hon. Daphne Strutt, daughter of Lord Fayleigh and one of England's most attractive society girls, intends to know how to wash dishes, darn socks and wait on the table before her impending marriage to 23-year-old Lord Acton.

She was visited by friends as she was dressed in the blue smock of a scullery maid, at a school for domestics near Beaconsfield. She told them:

"I am a scullery maid for the moment. If I had been a parlor maid I would have opened the door for you. Household work is such fun, and I am determined to know everything from washing clothes to kitchen maid's work before I am married."

50 Hurt in Collapse Of Gary Grandstand

GARY, Ind., June 9.—(AP.)—More than 50 persons were injured last night when a grandstand, seating almost 500 spectators at a pageant in Marquette Park, collapsed. Many of the injuries were due, police said, to frenzied efforts of hundreds to get clear of the wreckage.

TRAFFIC SAFETY GAIN SHOWN

KNOW YOUR OWN CITY

Cash Prizes! New!

While the entire series of 40 cartoons in this new contest will be based on the names of the public thoroughfares of Pittsburgh, the contest will be attractive to all readers of the Sun-Telegraph, no matter where they live, because under each contest picture there will be a list of thoroughfare names and in this list the correct answers can be found.

CONTEST PICTURE NO. 23

READ THESE SIMPLE RULES:

(1) Under the title, "Know Your Own City," the daily and Sunday Sun-Telegraph will publish a series of cartoons to run consecutively for 40 days, starting Sunday, May 17. All of these cartoons will represent a public thoroughfare in the territory commonly included in Pittsburgh, and prizes will be awarded to readers who submit the neatest and most nearly correct sets of pictures and answers.

(2) A total of $1,000 in cash prizes will be awarded, divided as indicated in another part of this announcement.

(3) This offer is open to all except employes of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and their families. You pay nothing. Files of the Sun-Telegraph are available at the Public Library or at the office of the Sun-Telegraph, and you may make tracings of the cartoons if you desire.

(4) Answers in the contest are not to be submitted until the entire set of 40 has been printed. After the last (No. 40) cartoon has appeared, entrants will be allowed 15 days to submit their sets of answers. They are to be addressed to the "Know Your Own City" Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

(5) All answers submitted become the property of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and none will be returned. The judges will be appointed by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and their decision will be final. In case of ties, a duplicate award will be paid to each tying contestant.

You will like the price★ as well as the quality...

What must you pay for the car you would like to own? Can you get a car that is well built, fast, easy to drive and good to look at—for the price you want to pay?

Indeed you can—for in Pontiac you get so much for your money. It is an outstanding General Motors value.

For instance, if you owned a small car in the past, you will find you can buy the fine Pontiac today for about what that small car cost you. Yet what extra value Pontiac gives you!

One fine thing you get is a 60 h. p. motor that is smooth and quiet at all times. It is a large motor, and so does all you ask with ease. And you can trust it to work that way as long as you have the car.

Then you will get a fine new Fisher body which is built to shut out heat, cold, rain and noise. The seat springs are deep—the cushions soft. Real mohair and whipcord give the style and long wear you want for pride and lasting value.

You will find the Pontiac very comfortable to ride in. There are rubber cushions at 43 points in the chassis—a fine-car feature which takes up most of the road shocks. Also there are four hydraulic shock absorbers to add to your comfort.

Your friends will say that Pontiac's lines and color and finish make it a car to be proud of. People will turn to watch it as you drive by. You will feel that you have bought fine-car value at a very low cost.

Of course you may say that we think more of our car than you might! Then why not drive the Pontiac and find out just how well it lives up to what we say about it? Any Oakland-Pontiac dealer will be glad to let you take a Pontiac, whenever you are ready to make the test.

He Hired Them to Dance With Wife, Then Accused Her of Flirtations

By CHARLOTTE NASH NIXON-NIRDLINGER

This is the thirteenth installment of her own life story by Mrs. Charlotte Nixon-Nirdlinger, recently acquitted in Nice, France, of the murder of her wealthy husband after a sensationally brief trial.

In previous chapters she told of her marriage to Mr. Nixon-Nirdlinger, their subsequent divorce and remarriage; the jealous quarrels that led to his disappearance; the automobile accident that changed his nature and the renewal of quarrels upon their last tragic trip to Europe.

Today Charlotte reveals for the first time some of her husintimate letters to friends. These are intended to show the strange ideas that obsessed Mr. Nixon-Nirdlinger during the weeks just before his tragic death.

By CHARLOTTE NIXON-NIRDLINGER
(Copyright, 1931, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

NICE.

Earlier in this series of articles I promised to tell of some of the intimate little letters Fred sent to his friends and which he let me see. I am revealing no confidence, since it was his ambition to write long letters and have as many people as possible read them. Besides they were brought out during my trial.

During our stay at St. Moritz they were chiefly concerned about my safety—or pretended to be. Fred agreed I should have plenty of sport and exercise, but the minute I indulged in them he objected. When I took up skiing he insisted that I go skating as a substitute. Lately several friends have shown me letters in which his fears for my well-being were expressed. Sometimes I have felt they hid another fear—that I was being admired too much by other men.

However, Fred himself was enthusiastic about sports, particularly the "curling" contests, which had captured his enthusiasm to such an extent that he donated what is known in St. Moritz as the "Philadelphia Trophy." This is what he wrote in one instance, a few months before his death, and I quote it to show how proud he was of his achievements and how he feared for his own safety.

Protested Skiing

"The Philadelphia Trophy," he wrote, "donated by a young humble friend, was played for during the past week . . . On the other hand, Charlotte has been passing up the curling, and even neglecting her skating, devoting her time to skiing. Principally because it is extremely dangerous I have objected.

"There seems to be an epidemic of skiing accidents this year and she will surely get hers, but you cannot make her see it that way. We did finally talk her into going into a skating contest last Wednesday, with some professional, and do you know that little monkey ran off with the third prize in the waltzing and fourth in her figure skating, besides capturing a dancing contest with Maj. Beaumont? That kid could walk away with her 'silver' this year if she would only concentrate, and get down to it, but, alas! and alack, her mind is on other things."

Now here I want to say while Fred seemed kind and solicitous about me, and wanted me to go skating, he had a different attitude in private. It sounded generous in the letter for him to say that I had captured a dancing contest with another man, but many a time, when I came home from a skating contest he would break into one of his fits of denunciation and accuse me and my skating partner of being too friendly. My own friends know this only too well.

On one occasion he hired a skating instructor. He came out to watch us. I felt his eyes on me all during the period of instruction. Then, when it was over, he would glower and mumble and again demand to know why I was so friendly with the instructor! It got so that I simply could not stand it and I went in for skiing because then I could be with my own set.

Life on Riviera

I should like to quote from another letter, written by Fred in December, 1930, after our arrival in Nice. It gives, I think, an interesting picture of life in the Riviera resort and also of Fred's reaction to the place and to my activities.

"Of all the gay life," he wrote, "there are only one or two big tea-dances in vogue; the Claridge and the Embassy, with perhaps, the Blue Moon, but that runs to the commoner class and is just a shade above the 'joints.' There are about a dozen of those rendezvous and sailor-places, but that is rating them high, as no one of any standing goes in.

"With darkness coming out at 3 p. m. it makes the afternoon a bit heavy, and one does like to break the monotony between dejuener (lunch) and 8 p. m. dinner. They never eat before that over here, and sometimes not till 9 . . . so it does make the afternoon long, so we took in the tea-dances.

"I punished Charlotte with the fox trots and the waltzes, but bought her a gigolo, or paid dancer, for the tangos, which she acquired on the steamer. She took an engineering course in the tango, as it were and as you no doubt gathered from last effusion.

"Damned clever, these tangoists. I have tried to pick out the most gentlemanly and graceful, but I guess I am as much of a failure at picking out gigs as the average wife is in picking out her husband's neckties, so take a tip from a failure. Women can make mistakes in picking out their husbands, but their dancers, swimmers and gigolos—never."

Fred Hired Gigolo

Now, so far as this gigolo business is concerned, I intend to explain in the next installment exactly why my husband hired one for me—and what the real result of it was. I intend to prove, too, that he hired a gigolo simply because he did not care to accompany me on dances and that he always followed me to the tea-dances and to the cafes to see that nothing happened. He even suspected the gigolo of making love to me!

In telling of our arrival in Nice, after a brief trip to Paris, Fred wrote again:

"Our villa looks fine, and seemed so good and real and wholesome when we landed. Only I had made the mistake of buying my wife too many things; there was no room for my things nor for me, so I had to live at a hotel the first few days. Fellow husbands, take a tip from me: Use this as an alibi when reaching Paris or anywhere: don't humor them. When she got things in shape and the firm needed money, then I moved in, and it has been great. We had three cooks. We wrote to all our friends to get a line on a good cook for us, and they all did, and engaged them But it is all right now. Do not believe that old gag about too many cookies."

Here, then, is only a faint indication of the jumble of misunderstandings and false attitudes that was taking possession of Fred and was swiftly closing in on me. Perhaps there seemed to be humor in these and other letters I shall quote—but in reality Fred's humor was becoming ominous, dangerous.

Philippine Church Head Speaks Here

Archbishop Gregario Aglipay, head and founder of the Independent Church of the Philippines, spoke last night in the First Unitarian Church, Morewood and Ellsworth avenues. He discussed Unitarian doctrines. The 71-year-old archbishop was the center of a religious revolution in 1902, which resulted in a break from the Catholic church and the establishment of the Independent church. The Independent church has a following of about 3,000,000 people.

Delay Caused Liner Wreck, Officer Says

LOS ANGELES, June 9.—(AP.)—Second Officer John P. McVicar, by his own testimony, could have saved the coastwise liner Harvard from destruction off Point Arguello, May 30, had he acted immediately after he received a radio report that the ship was in danger.

McVicar testified before the Federal Steamboat Inspection Board yesterday he waited 10 minutes to verify radio compass bearings from shore before calling Capt. Lyle B. Hillsinger.

Poisoned Girl Balks Identity Search

CLEVELAND, June 9.—(AP.)—The mystery of the identity of a young woman found in a downtown hotel, Saturday, suffering from poisoning was only increased today by her self "identification."

She told a policewoman that she was Helen Johanson, of Buffalo, and that her father's name was Nils Johanson. A man by that name was listed in the Buffalo city directory, but he was only 21 and had moved.

Missionaries Flee Chinese Communists

SHANGHAI, June 9.—(AP.)—Ten American Methodist Episcopal missionaries stationed at Yenping, Fukien province, withdrew from there to Foochow today because of the menace of Communists and bandits.

PASTORS HEAR TALK ON CRIME

Speaking at the monthly meetings of the Lutheran ministers in Trinity Church, North Side, and of Methodist ministers, Penn avenue, yesterday, Attorney Frank P. Canuti declared that delays in the administration of justice are responsible for the spread of crime. He said:

"The legal profession can aid in the solution of the crime problem by giving the people an administration of justice that will bring criminals to prompt accounting and sure punishment. We can remedy these wrongs by a more constant and better use of the ballot."

Canuti is a candidate for judge of the Common Pleas Court of Allegheny County.

The Bear Leaves the Zoo

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Best news we have heard so far this financial semester is that the bear must depart from his happy Wall street game reservation.

The short has his place in the scheme of speculation. He claims his job is to prevent the inflation of stocks and false values.

That's his argument. But he forgets we like our values false.

Like the skeleton at the barbecue he rattles his bones and says, "You, too, are on margin."

And if we cannot keep the skeleton away from the lunch we can at least make it a Dutch treat.

He has been parcel and bundle of Wall street since the works started. He is as quiet as an eel on the ebb tide.

While all the world is happy, careless and gay he puts the torch to paper profits, separates the united and forestalls the past by smacking you in the face with the future.

He is the self-appointed Wall street commissioner of weights and measures and took singing lessons from the shepherd boy who whiled away the sunny hours yelling, "Wolf."

He rubs everything against the grain and you get the splinters in your thumb.

The bear is three indelible shades blacker than gloom and has one of those smiles you could sharpen a pencil on.

If the wealth of the world was in one canoe his would be the hand that rocked the cradle.

When the canary was singing cheerfully and profitably in the window cage he mixed dynamite with the birdseed.

He may not be the public enemy. But he ain't any ally.

If his mission in life is to teach us a lesson all we can say is that we earned the diploma.

For him no minstrel raptures swell. And all you have to do in order to blackball this fearsome member is to drop a cough drop in the mail chute.

Opportunity for College Men

In his last annual report, Dr. Elliott, of Harvard, strongly advised young men to get into practical life as soon as possible and not expect a college degree to insure success.

William Maxwell, Vice President, Thomas A. Edison, Inc., says: "If I were twenty-one again I would not seek a salaried position of any sort until I was twenty-five. Instead I would become a salesman or a canvasser on a commission basis, and I would do so before I left college. I can conceive of no better way to develop business backbone and stamina in a young man than to give him something to sell on a commission."

The first paragraph of the Yale Alumni Weekly, May 29, 1931, presents a "Student S. O. S." appeal to Yale Alumni to help find employment for students this summer.

During the last thirty years thousands of men have paid their way through college in part or in whole by selling "Wear-Ever" Aluminum Specialties. Bruce Barton is one and N. Dean Jay, representative of J. P. Morgan's Bank of Paris, is another. Of course, many men associated with the Aluminum industry secured their "connections" by first "taking a job" selling "Wear-Ever" Specialties—made by the same Company which makes the "Wear-Ever" utensils sold by stores and the "Wear-Ever" Equipments used by the leading hospitals and hotels of the country.

Nowadays, the work of selling anything is hard. However, if a college man does even SOMETHING at the job of selling goods, he acquires confidence and knowledge which will help him in any work he ever will do. Moreover, it is better to earn something than to earn nothing, and it is better to acquire experience now which will be of value later than it is to acquire nothing this summer.

If you are interested in knowing what "Wear-Ever" Specialty Salesmen are actually doing today—if you are really willing to work—we suggest you write a letter to Dept. P.

The second week of romantic June was ushered in, like the first week, by a society wedding of distinction.

And Pittsburgh's second society bride of June was Elizabeth Dewey Wells, daughter of Mrs. Benjamin Glyde Wells, of the Schenley Apartments. And the bridegroom was Rowland Erving, son of Mrs. Rowland H. Erving, of Cathedral Mansions.

The stately ceremony took place yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock in the Third Presbyterian Church, which hasn't seen a notable society wedding for several years. Officiating was the Rev. Dr. W. L. McEwan, the pastor, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Drury L. Patchell, of the Episcopal Church of the Ascension.

Rose and pink peonies and snapdragons in tall standards were striking against a background of cibotium ferns. And slender white tapers in candelabra lighted the scene.

Regal Is The Bride

Regal was the bride, given in marriage by her brother, Calvin Wells. Her gown of white satin in the princess mode had a yoke of rose point lace ending in long, tight-fitting sleeves and a deep-V in the back. From the neckline fell her court train of white satin over which cascaded a veil of tulle. And she wore a cap of rose point lace. Lilies of the valley, white bovardia and creamy gardenias formed the bridal bouquet.

Young Louise Dewey Marsh, niece of the bride, as maid of honor, and Mary Glyde Marsh, also a niece, as flower girl, wore quaint shell pink crepe frocks, and hats of rough pink straw trimmed with pink velvet ribbon. And they carried small Dresden bouquets.

The bridesmaids were Mrs. James I. Marsh, sister of the bride; Mrs. Calvin Wells, Betty McKay, Elizabeth Rutan and Mrs. Paul Haviland, all of Pittsburgh; Petrice Mutch, of Bryn Mawr; Mrs. Louis B. Wells, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Raymond G. Scarlett, of Baltimore.

Charming Costumes

Charming gowns of spring-green chiffon, fashioned with double capes to form brief sleeves and a bertha effect in front, and with skirts fitted at the hip-line and flaring below the knee, were worn by the bridesmaids, with large coarse straw hats of the same shade, trimmed with green velvet ribbon. And they carried exquisite Dresden bouquets, bordered in green tulle.

James Chambers McKay was his cousin's best man, and Morris G. Benney, William D. George, Jr., Wilson M. Book, Alan Evans, George Pearson Rhodes, Jr., and James McKay, all of Pittsburgh; Geiger Lee, of Germantown, Pa.; Thomas C. Hughes, of Edgewater Park, N. J., and Louis B. Wells, of Philadelphia, were the ushers.

Following the ceremony was a reception at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Marsh, Wallingford street. Spring flowers decorated the home, and white iris and peonies the bridal table, covered with cloth of silver, and laid for 29 guests.

Many See Ceremony

I saw ever so many folks at the wedding, of course. Mrs. Edward Purcell Mellon II, wore a blue gown printed with a small white motif and having flaring cuffs and shawl collar bordered in navy blue. Her hat was of blue, too.

Mary Mellon McClung chose a smart black and yellow suit, and Mrs. H. N. Van Voorhis, up from Sewickley, a blue and green and yellow crepe printed in small design. Mrs. Stephen Stone was there, and Mrs. Joseph W. Marsh in brocaded lame, and her daughter, Mrs. Jacob B. Payton, in flowered blue chiffon.

Barbara Ewing chose a powder blue costume, and Nancy Brown wore a buttercup yellow crepe suit. Mrs. George Pomeroy Bassett chose a black and yellow floral crepe; Marjorie Kimball, a brown and white costume; Susan O'Neil a beige costume, and Marie Louise Bickford a green crepe frock and an eggshell hat.

Navy Blue Favored

Navy blue was the favorite of a trio arriving together, Mrs. Wallace H. Rowe, Jr., Mary Childs and Elizabeth Jenkins. Lydia Irish I saw, and Emily Frew and Mrs. Reginald G. Quaile. Ellen McClay and Helen Murdoch arrived together, and the three attractive Doyle sisters, Rebecca, Virginia and Nancy, wearing navy blue, green and brown costumes.

Lydia Irish chose a novel redingote, having a dress of printed crepe with long sleeves and a coat of black crepe with short sleeves.

Virginia Drake chose blue and white crepe, and Mrs. James McKay looked smart in a red and white printed crepe having a white patent leather belt. A red and white straw hat completed her costume.

Others I had a glimpse of were Frances Reed, the William Morris Fureys, whose daughter, Virginia, was married a week ago yesterday; Betty Childs and Mrs. Francis deLacy Hyde, who wore a green crepe suit having a cape to form sleeves.

Arriving with Mrs. W. L. Mellon, Jr., were Mrs. Harold J. Dorrance and her daughters, La Salle and Eloise. Mrs. Mellon wore a brown and white costume. Mrs. Dorrance was in black. La Salle in a beige and brown crepe suit and Eloise in a navy blue crepe suit. Wilhelmina Balken wore chartreuse green crepe. Mary Carroll was there, and Mrs. W. Edgar Reed.

Rockledge Garden Club's Flower Awards Made

Thirty-five varieties of flowers from her garden won the prize in that class for Mrs. J. S. Foster at the meeting of the Rockledge Garden Club yesterday. The sweepstakes were taken by Mrs. B. M. Herr with an exquisite colonial bouquet, and among other winners and honorable mentions were Mrs. Harry Davis, Mrs. Alexander P. Lindsay, Mrs. Sidney Chalfant, Mrs. J. Lee Barnes, Mrs. W. B. Wray, Mrs. George Klein, Mrs. James H. McCrady, Jr., Mrs. J. Brooks Huff, Mrs. George M. Swan and Mrs. J. G. McAbee.

Mrs. Frank D. Newbury, of Briar Cliff road, was hostess at luncheon for about 60 members and guests, all of whom visited her lovely garden. After luncheon Mrs. Lindsay, the president, introduced Mrs. B. W. Dunham, president of the Oakmont Garden Club, who gave a delightful talk on Japanese gardens which she had visited. She told of the different blooms that are reverenced and celebrated by the Japanese, each month having its own special flower. She also told something of the superstitions and symbolism connected with the flowers—the iris, for instance, is believed to be beneficial if put in the bath water, and, if eaten, to be a panacea for all ills.

The people make pilgrimages to lotus ponds just to hear the gentle popping sound these flowers (August bloom) make when they are opening, Mrs. Dunham said. Although the Japanese cultivate virtually the same flowers as are grown in this country, they do not plant in their gardens, but in pots and crocks, so that the flowers may be moved from place to place in a varying decorative scheme. One advantage the Japanese has over the American garden is that it is so planted and arranged as to be beautiful all the year, the speaker observed.

Japanese Gardens

In the mid-afternoon, the women stepped across the lawn and through a friendly gap in the hedge to Mrs. B. M. Herr's home where the flower exhibit had already been judged by Miss Mary Louise Davison who later gave an explanatory talk about the awards.

Assisting with the luncheon were Mrs. J. M. Hipple, Mrs. Swan, Mrs. Wayne Smith and Mrs. Barnes.

FROCKS WITH REMOVABLE CAPES ATTACHED TO MODE

Sketched In Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, June 9. — Removable capes cannot be detached from the word of smartness this season. As the season advances, we see more and more that the frock with the detachable cape is a winner in the fashion stakes. No doubt there is the tendency to regard the fashion of the dress with matching jacket, as just a little overdone, since one sees it everywhere. And so, as a clever and pleasing alternative, we are turning to the dress with its little removable cape which may be of matching color or pattern, or else offer a sharp contrast. This type of frock is extremely youthful and youthifying, which will be sufficient to recommend it to the woman who has declared herself wedded to the frock with its own little jacket.

THE OTHER SKETCH shows an afternoon dress of white mousseline, dotted in green. The removable cape has revers of green and white plaided taffeta and there is a wide crushed belt of the same material. The softly hanging, graceful skirt is extremely wide and rippling.

ALL STYLES $5

The top two in Ducklin . . . a new fabric-development, exclusively for fine shoes. Natural linen color, smartly dull in finish. The one-strap is appliqued with tiny band of beige leather. The pump is plain and trim, just right to dye in any dainty color.

Widow Asks $150,000 In Airplane Death

PHILADELPHIA, June 9.—(AP.)—Trial of a $150,000 damage suit instituted by Mrs. Janet F. Law, Philadelphia, has been started in the Federal District Court against Transcontinental Air Transport, Inc., owner of the plane in which Mrs. Law's husband, Duff C. Law, was killed at Stout Field, Indianapolis, December 22, 1929. Law was a technicolor expert for Warner Brothers.

Thiel Endowment Fund Total Assured

GREENVILLE, Pa., June 9.—(AP.)—By raising $16,000 Greenville oversubscribed its quota by $6,000 in a drive toward the $750,000 Thiel College endowment fund, which ended in this district last Saturday night. Meadville raised a total of $54,000. The remainder of the total will be supplied by the Pittsburgh synod of the United Lutheran Church.

Pershing Lauds Negroes as Soldiers

PARIS, June 9.—(AP.)—Gen. Pershing, speaking at a tea for American Negro Gold Star Mothers, said that when the Negro soldier is properly trained and properly led, he is the equal of any fighting man in the world. He spoke of his own experience with the 10th United States Cavalry during the Spanish-American War as proof of his assertion.

Far and away

the smoothest Eight in its price class

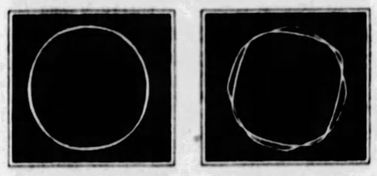
Scientific Torsiographic tests prove the "rounded" performance of The Dictator is unrivaled by any Eight in its price class . . . . . .



THE Dictator Eight has what engineers know as a "sweet" engine—an engine free from perceptible vibration periods. Linked with Free Wheeling, this vibrationless power results in motoring of new smoothness—new restfulness.

Motor roar is hushed by improved muffling, which conserves horsepower, and by carburetor silencing, introduced by Studebaker.

At no point in the whole sparkling speed range, is there a "rough spot" to mar The Dictator's "rounded" performance. The Dictator has a nine-bearing crankshaft, balanced not only statically, but dynamically. What remains of vibration is further minimized by a crankshaft vibration damper. Dual carburetion and manifolding feed equal amounts of fuel to each cylinder, avoiding the common fault of "starving" the end cylinders, and assuring even power impulses.

With Free Wheeling you enjoy relaxed motoring. Clutch-pushing is almost forgotten. Gear-shifting is effortless and quiet. Added safety is certified by scores of public traffic authorities. You save 15% to 20% on gasoline and oil. Your car will last longer, and cost less to maintain.

Drive The Dictator Eight after you've driven the others. The contrast will sell you!

"Rounded" Performance

The Torsiograph, one of the most nearly infallible of automotive laboratory instruments, records accurately the vibration of any rotating shaft. The closer the record chart approaches a true circle, the more nearly perfect the balance of the crankshaft. Above are shown the Torsiographic records of The Dictator Eight nine (9) bearing crankshaft and those of two other eights of double The Dictator's price. Notice the smooth roundness of The Dictator graph contrasted with the irregularity, or "humpiness" of the other two.

LEWIS ATTENDS HOOVER PARLEY

Charles F. Lewis, director of the Buhl Foundation of Pittsburgh, has accepted an invitation to become a member of President Hoover's conference on home building and home ownership, Lewis left last night for Chicago where the first meeting of the committee on large scale operations was to be held today in the Union League Club.

The foundation has conducted a study of housing conditions in Pittsburgh, and of advanced community planning developments in the East, preparatory to undertaking construction of a modern community for moderate salaried employes in the downtown district, announced last week. The project calls for the immediate building of 125 homes at a cost of $1,000,000 which will be financed by the foundation.

ALIEN JAILED FOR FALSE OATH

Mikola Obradovic, of Rochester, a native of Jugoslavia, was sentenced by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson to serve four months in the Beaver County Jail, when he pleaded guilty of making false affidavit to the Commissioner of Immigration in an application for a permit to re-enter this country.

Obradovic, who entered the United States legally in 1922, made a visit to his native country two years later, on a permit allowing him to return during a specified period. He sold it to a fellow countryman, who used it in coming to America. Obradovic returned in 1927, entering illegally from Canada at Detroit.

Later he applied and obtained another re-entry permit, claiming his last entry was in 1922.

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor.

CHICAGO, June 9.

Fear of a government monopoly of radio stations was expressed here today by Walter J. Damm, Milwaukee, president of the National Association of Broadcasters. Damm deplored what he declared to be a movement toward government ownership and operation of broadcasting in the United States as practiced in most European countries. In his speech before the Radio Manufacturers' Association he praised private ownership of stations and asked that dealers encourage listeners to express their preference for this kind of management.

Darrell V. Martin

Interference of Mexican, Cuban and Canadian stations with American broadcasters has attracted the notice of the State Department and a North American conference of broadcasters will be called soon, Damm informed the convention.

The convention is at its peak with nearly 30,000 delegates registered. The writer spent most of yesterday viewing television equipment at WMAQ and WIBO and on the show floor. Pictures are better but far from perfect. Judging from what is shown here, television sets will not be marketed seriously until 1932 or 1933.

Dancers, boxers and cartoonists worked in WMAQ television studios yesterday. The artist performs in front of two large photo-electric cells which absorb an image. This impression is relayed through a machine similar to a motion picture projector, then transmitted over the air the same as audible signals.

Television "cameras" are particularly sensitive to colors. Gray photographs best on the radio, so pianos and all instruments in the studio are colored gray wherever possible.

Last night several Pittsburghers were guests of James A. Simpson at the broadcast of Ferde Grofe's Orchestra at the NBC in Merchandise Mart.

Ferde's arrangements of La Paloma and On Miami Shore were typical of the color that predominates in all his music. His Grand Canyon Suite is to have its premiere on the air soon.

Tom, of the Tom, Dick and Harry Trio, which broadcasts with Grofe on Monday nights, is Bud Van Dover, who was given his start in radio by T. R. McLean at KWK and is a former engineer of WCAE.

The writer learned that Jean Paul King and Lloyd Yoder, former Carnegie Tech star athlete, worked together on the Pacific network before King came to NBC in Chicago. King is a congenial youth. He speaks into the microphone with great assurance.

The microphone will journey to "Rum Row" this evening. An attempt to broadcast just what goes on beyond the 12-mile limit will be made when a party of broadcasters reaches a point in the Atlantic about 40 miles off New York. Efforts will be made to contact one of the vessels regularly located on "Rum Row," with Ford Frick, announcer, describing all he sees. The broadcast, in which it is also hoped to interview one of the "Rum Row" captains, will be heard at 9:30 p. m. over WJAS. A symphony orchestra, directed by Howard Barlow, will introduce the program and stand by to play if the "Rum Row" feature is a failure.

Merlin H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Company, will address the convention tomorrow.

THE LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, June 9.—Age has its fling in every phase of radio save jazz. From the gates of jazz it finds itself barred.

Radio rajahs, unduly sympathetic, have painted boldly on that portion of their ramparts reserved for the hotsy-totsy music of the day, so that the old may read: "All hope abandon, ye who enter here." Whether it is hope of continued life or of fame and fortune is not known.

It is time they erased it. It is time they welcomed music maestros on the shady side of 60, if they would hold to their aim of novelty.

And it would be a novelty on the loudspeakers—aged maestros beating their way through the bushes of Gershwin and Grofe and their followers along the high road of jazz. I have a notion they would bear up under the strain. In fact, it seems to me the strain is greatly overrated.

Jazz today, influenced chiefly by radio, has become restrained, subdued—a thing of languor and softness. Today it rarely makes the heart beat faster. It is, so to speak, right up the old men's alley.

The old men should have a chance at it, if only because it would be something new in radio. They might even bring a new note to jazz. They might make of it a thing of even greater charm to those dear, dear bright young people. With their more mature judgment, their greater knowledge of music, of dance rhythms, they would not be content to din "Would You Like to Take a Walk" or any other current jingle of Broadway into the ears until you longed for a revolution or a first class earthquake.

They would also set about, to our way of thinking, to making ingratiating dance tunes of the lesser classics without sacrificing the melody of the tunes or causing their long-dead composers to turn in their graves—something that the majority of the younger stick-wielders are not able to do. And they might be inclined to refurbish the familiar hoedowns of the countryside, long neglected by the dance bandmen of today.

The old hoedowns are a basic part of our musical fabric. To their rugged chants a nation lifted itself gaily by its bootstraps to a place in the sun. They provided inspiration and stimulation when there was work to be done. They offered relaxation when it was time to play. They, too, need representation today on the waxed floors of the republic. The old maestros would see that they got it—got it along with the less sappy tunes of Tin Pan Alley.

THIS YEAR HOLDS A HIGHER PLACE IN PUBLIC FAVOR THAN AT ANY TIME IN ITS HISTORY

TO DESIGN PROGRESSIVELY · TO SELL HONESTLY · TO BUILD FAITHFULLY · TO SERVICE SINCERELY

Since the enthusiastic reception given the 1931 Oldsmobile on the occasion of its introduction to the public in January of this year, Oldsmobile's popularity has continued to increase, month after month + + As a result, Oldsmobile is now enjoying a greater percentage of the business in its price class than ever before. And new thousands of owners are telling their friends of the pleasure and satisfaction of Oldsmobile ownership + + Many of the reasons for this growing popularity are understandable upon examination of the car . . . for its desirable features are self-evident. But there are more fundamental reasons for the definite preference being shown for Oldsmobile + + Four years ago Olds Motor Works adopted a policy toward owners which has been followed to the letter, year after year, in the development of Oldsmobile cars. This policy took the form of four great responsibilities . . . to design progressively . . . to build faithfully . . . to sell honestly . . . and to service sincerely. Upon these four responsibilities Olds Motor Works has founded its success. And these constitute the policy which the public has so wholeheartedly endorsed this year + + Olds Motor Works wishes to express its appreciation to the men and women throughout the country who have made the 1931 Oldsmobile the car of their choice . . . and who, by recommending its good qualities to their friends, are adding still further to Oldsmobile's steady advancement in public esteem.

MAN BEATEN. ROBBED: CAPTURES SUSPECT

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

William Pfarr

We have a weakness for news and gossip about speakeasies. We could go on for years and years without being interested in knowing that dainty Bessie Bump, the petite soubrette at the Whoopee night club, was goofy about the trumpet player, but we're all ears at the rumor that Charlie, the bartender, is the father of two sets of twins and has been wearing that Elk charm since he was 13 years old. To satisfy this weakness is considerable bother, for, needless to say, we wouldn't think of breaking the law by venturing into a speakeasy. Thus we have to stand outside and nail the departing law-breakers. We nailed one, the other night, who is pretty much of a rounder and he told us of a new development in speakeasies.

In the first place, he said, most speakeasy proprietors are excellent businessmen and, had they gone in for banking instead, probably would pay seven and eight per cent interest, rather than the now prevalent three.

This new development concerns food. He said the speakeasies are trying to attract customers, not with their beer and whisky, but with steaks and chops. He named four speakeasies in which he said a fellow could get a steak dinner for $1 that would cost $2 in a legitimate restaurant and still wouldn't be as good.

It appears the speakeasies don't make a nickel on the food concession, but, in fact, probably lose a few pennies on each meal. Our rounder explained, though, that it's a rare customer who won't take a few profit-making beers, or an ounce or two of rye, with or before his steak.

The mere mention of a juicy broiled steak, with home-fried potatoes, causes palpitation of the heart in this corner, and we don't mind admitting that we're weakening in our resolution not to violate the laws of the land. What we need right now is a good talking-to from Mr. Wickersham.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., June 9.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

The government floated an eight hundred million dollar loan the other day and Al Capone took most of it himself. There is the guy that should be Secretary of the Treasury. Just turn the country over to him and split the profits with him. I see by statistics of what the soldiers have done with their late bonus money, a big item is second-hand cars.

Wickercomish Will Need Funds For Beer Test

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Wickersham Committee is studying the effects of 4 per cent beer.

It must have copped another appropriation.

We can wise up the Wicky commish from memory. The first glass of 4 per cent brew makes you feel as if you can whip the world, committees and all.

The second glass confirms that fermented opinion and the third glass makes you step out and try it.

The fourth stein of 4 per cent suds is the best of all, because that's the one the bartender throws in your face to bring you to after he has tapped you on the head with a bungstarter.

There is plenty of percentage in four plus beer and we hope the Wickercommish has worked itself up to that high pitch by easy stages.

One of its manifestations is to break up committees, reveal the future, separate the united and defy the law.

What the Wickerwackies require is a guinea pig for their 4 per cent tests. And as a horrible example of the vintage of 1910 we are willing to offer the pickled body to science.

As this committee was appointed by Mr. Hoover we warn him that he had better get used to hearing his doorbell ring at five in the morning and hearing the boys yell:

"Woo hoo, Herbie, itsh okay, old boy, old boy."

THRILL BANDIT CONFESSES TO HOLDUPS

Faced by 10 Victims, Boy Corroborates Their Tales Of Chain Store Robberies

Confronted by managers of 10 North Side grocery stores, Joseph Schatzel, 17, of 142 Lanark street, alleged boy bandit, today calmly admitted the accusations and in a number of instances corroborated their testimony. Schatzel was held for further investigation by Magistrate Thomas D. Jones in Morals Court.

He testified he had bought an automobile with the proceeds of the robberies.

He was captured by Traffic Patrolman Andrew Jurdas after a chase through North Side streets yesterday afternoon following the robbery of a P. H. Butler store at 424 Suismon street. According to police, Schatzel said:

"I don't know why I started in the 'stick-up' business, except that it seemed an easy way to get money, and it gave me a thrill. I never had any bullets in the revolver until yesterday, and that one I had forgotten to take out after trying to shoot a rabbit that was eating vegetables from grandmother's garden. I spent the money playing cards and going to movies, and when I'd be broke I'd go out and 'take' another store. On five of the 'jobs' I stood in the street and watched police cars searching the neighborhood for me. That gave me a big kick."

Near collapse after testifying against his brother-in-law in a murder trial in Criminal Court, Morris Kaminski, 28, Locust street, McKeesport, was carried by city detectives to the first aid room in the Courthouse and revived.

He had just testified that Louis Zemler, 26, McKeesport, had borrowed his automobile the night of February 14, 1930, and on his returning the car had said that he and two companions had held up a barbecue stand in Long Run road, and had shot a man, who, he feared, was killed.

Assistant District Attorney Earl R. Jackson is asking for a verdict of first degree from the jury of nine women and three men.

After six months away from the studios, Louise Dresser is planinng a reappearance in "Poker Alice," a story of the gold mining days in California.

"Poker Alice" is owned by Miss Dresser and her husband, Jack Gardner. It was collaborated upon by Authors Philip Klein and Edward T. Lowe, and is now being discussed by Fox with an eye to producing and releasing the film. A definite decision will be reached upon Winfield Sheehan's return from New York.

Besides Fox, Paramount is also interested in having the star make the picture on their lot.

Like "Calamity Jane," the character Miss Dresser portrayed recently in a Richard Arlen picture, "Poker Alice" was a historic figure in early days, but where the "coiner was hard as flint, "Poker Alice" had a heart of gold which will allow the star an entirely different characterization.

Louise Dresser

Miss Dresser's long absence has been spent at home caring for her mother, who dislocated her hip and suffered other injuries when she fell headlong down a flight of stairs.

Now she is greatly improved and has been moved from the Beverly Hills home to a sanitarium. Being situated in a higher altitude, physicians believe that she will be fully recovered within six weeks.

NO LONGER "SWEET HOME"

Offering a modern version, Ralph Spence explains that home is where one-half of the family waits for the other half to return with the automobile.

LATEST GOSSIP

In celebration of their second wedding anniversary, Joan Crawford and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., invited eight couples to a dinner party last Thursday. Imagine their chagrin when six of the eight girls, all blondes, arrived in white gowns all more or less similar in design. . . . Changing names seems to be the fad these days. Now it's Lillian Bond who is going to have a new title as soon as Warners, her new bosses, can think of an appropriate one . . . Frances McCoy, who recently finished a contract at Fox, is saying goodby to Hollywood temporarily and heading for New York. She plans to come back and try again . . . On the other hand, Humphrey Bogart, also through at Fox, is returning to Broadway for a show . . . Another attractive couple who are going around places are Maureen O'Sullivan and Russell Gleason . . . Hollywood's latest craze is antique milk glassware. Lilyan Tashman and Eleanor Boardman started the fad, which has spread to the extent that William Haines and the other antique dealers cannot obtain the odd, and I might add, expensive pieces fast enough . . . Just as the romance between Phillips Holmes and Ethel Sutherland seems to be blossoming Phil is leaving on a month's vacation. He will go to New York and bring his younger brother and sister back with him via the Panama Canal. Upon his return, production will start on "The Man I Killed," with Ernst Lubitsch directing.

Phillips Holmes

Even the dogs in Hollywood are temperamental and demand doubles. A few days ago a terrier was brought on Eddie Cantor's set to be used in a sequence in "Palmy Days." The action required that Eddie absent-mindedly douse the animal into a tub of suds and rub him on a washboard. Being long on mentality and short on physical courage, the dog rebelled at the procedure. However, the trainer produced another terrier who had no resistance or just didn't care and the scenes were obtained.

Fat Men

I don't care how fat you are or how much you hate to get out and walk a couple of miles. If you will take one-half a teaspoon of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning for 4 weeks and cut out pastries, sugar and fatty meats—

You will feel so good—so energetic and the urge for activity will be so great that you will immensely enjoy a daily walk of several miles—and lose fat.

While you are losing fat you will be gaining in energy—in endurance—in ambition. Your skin will grow clearer and your eyes will sparkle with the good health that Kruschen brings.

Just try one 85c bottle of Kruschen Salts; it will last you 4 weeks. After you have taken one bottle the old arm chair won't hold you any more—you'll want to be up and doing—you'll enjoy work—you'll sleep like a top and probably live years longer. Get Kruschen at any live druggist in America with the understanding that you must be joyfully satisfied or money back.

W. R. Daniels, of Richmond Hill, N. Y., writes: "After 2 bottles of Kruschen, I've removed 3 inches from my belt, feel 25% more active, mind is clearer, eruptions have disappeared. Am 46 years old and feel 20 years younger. I get up feeling 100%. Kruschen sure is great!"

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

When Flo Ziegfeld quit the "Follies" habit several years ago he slammed the gates of opportunity against the faces of a lot of gals. Every year there is a new crop of peaches maturing. Every year one of the "glorified" lasses of former "Follies" found that trademark sufficient to open the doors of places where beauty has a monetary value, especially the films. Those with real talent have stuck. They include Marion Davies, Mae Murray, Dorothy Mackaill, Jacqueline Logan, Billie Dove, Louise Brooks, Noel Francis, Susan Conroy and Claudia Dell. After a lapse of five years, a new crop of Ziegfeld girls will be on view when the "Follies of 1931" makes its debut in the Nixon next Monday. And it probably will not be many months before we hear about some movie stude luring some likely "Follies" girl from the Ziegfeld menage.

Among the new Ziegfeld beauties is Dorothy Flood, winner of magazine beauty contest. Hazel Forbes, Christine Maple, Ruth Paterson, Betty Dumbris, Marjorie LeVoe and Helen Walsh have been seen with other Ziegfeld shows and have posed for artists and sculptors.

Cap'n Menke, the voyaging impresario, is in Pittsburgh, arranging for the reopening of his marine opry house, the good ship Golden Rod, at the port of Montrose. For his aquastage Skipper Menke has hired a new sheaf of troupers. Better ones, we have heard. He aims at a higher grade of production and is in hopes that the caliber of his cast will permit of a more serious interpretation of the dramatic art than was possible last summer, when both players and audiences turned showboat nights into burlesque revels.

Small Timer says the lazier a man is the better he is at inventing reasons why tomorrow is a better day for hanging the screen door than today.

David Pesetzki, who formerly conducted the Penn Orchestra, will shake the baton at the men of music there again, beginning Friday. Since he went away several months ago, Dave has been in New York and Gollywood. He had a chance to direct orchestras playing accompaniment for the talkers, but refused. Who can blame him? No audience sees those orchestras, and Dave is part of the show. Did I say "part"? Well, let it go—give his gang some credit. We'll bet a dime against a traffic ticket that he brought back some new idees.

Heart Melody Of Danube In Pitt

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Where our American film producers try to get sophistication, as far as Will Hays and the sensitive censor permit, your German Kino-Fabrikant ladles out sentiment by the bucketful. That is the way to lure the elusive Mark out of the pockets of people who sing the mournful "Loreley" whenever they feel particularly hilarious. If there are a few plaintive folk songs and a lonely maiden out of Fri Marlitt's Family Album, the film is a big success.

"Melodie des Herzens," which opened at the Pitt Theater last night, is German only by adoption, the scene being laid in Budapest and a Hungarian village. The heroine is not only deficient in sophistication, but displays a measure of naivete almost childish. Coming to the big city as a housemaid, she meets a soldier and of course falls in love. He is saving his money to buy himself a horse, first step to affluence and independence.

'TIS A WICKED WORLD

Before he gets that far his sweetheart has lost her job for staying out late, and has started on the downward path. He learns of her deception and goes home on leave of absence to marry the village bride his father has bargained for. The wedding festivities are under way when the forsaken sweetheart turns up. Spurned by him, she buys a horse with her savings, takes it to the tavern where he is wasting his little hoard, and rushes off to the nearby lake to drown herself. He leaps upon the horse and comes in time to save her. No doubt they lived happily forever after.

SPLENDID CHARACTER WORK

It's a simple plot, told with the naturalness of some village tale by Auerbach or Eotvos. The characterization is remarkable — one would almost think that village types had been picked instead of actors. The two old peasants haggling about the bride's dot might be the real thing.

In fact, throughout the picture there is clear evidence that the director has used available scenes and crowds instead of creating an artificial world as they do in Hollywood. The pictures of Budapest, the holiday gayeties, the rural scenes with their barnyard ensemble, the horse market and other episodes are genuine. But so is the acting of the principal characters, and of many minor bits, while the music, like the dialect, has the real Magyar swing and melancholy.

"Melody of the Heart" is a tender idyl with a rich humorous background—refreshing as a trip to the country.

'Tis Mystery On Warner Screen

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"The Maltese Falcon," mystery melodrama, is the new picture in the Warner. There are plots, counterplots, murders and that sort of thing. And a statuette is the cause of it all.

The film stars Bebe Daniels, but it is Ricardo Cortez who walks away with most of it. The reason is not so much acting ability as it is opportunity to monopolize the affair by virtue of a role that gives him more prominence than the star.

Cortez is a Romeo-type detective. He likes the ladies, but he loves the silver dollars. He goes through endless episodes and endless closeups with that big, questionable grin of his.

Miss Daniels doesn't fare so well. But she's going to get all the candy and cigarets she wants, so we guess that's something. But she ends up in a way you'd never expect the heroine to end up.

The film is based on the story by Dashiell Hammett. It manages suspense and keeps the finis in doubt until finis time.

Supporting players include Dudley Digges, Una Merkel, Robert Elliott, Thelma Todd, Otto Matiesen, Oscar Apfel, Walter Long and J. Farrell MacDonald. It was directed by Roy Del Ruth.

'RADIO DOCTOR' APPEALS FINE

Dr. J. E. Johnson, so-called radio doctor, has taken an appeal to Superior Court from the fine of $100 and one-year parole imposed upon him by Judge Samuel H. Gardner following his conviction of attempting to obtain money by false pretense, in Criminal Court. Judge Gardner granted a supersedeas and fixed bail at $500.

Johnson was accused of practicing what he termed aetheronics, or the transmission of medical treatment by radio waves to persons at a distance. A Sun-Telegraph reporter and County Detective David Drexler testified that for $25, he agreed to treat their mythical sister for cancer.

Can Love Without Marriage Ever Be a Success?

Is free love ever right?

Does it ever work out happily?

Two young people want to know. They are not reckless, lawless specimens of Flaming Youth. They are serious, decent and honorable. Their parents hold the strings . . . they cannot, yet, command their own lives.

Yet they feel that they cannot live without each other any longer. And so they've thought of a compromise. They'll join their lives "without benefit of clergy" as that ancient phrase is commonly (though incorrectly) used.

A COMMON PROBLEM

Belong to each other, but keep that belonging a secret.

"It's as good as marriage!" cries the girl. But the boy doubts—and expresses his doubts in this letter. It is, perhaps, a more important letter than you realize. Thousands of adoring but penniless young couples are facing this same problem. And many of them have decided to make this same experiment. To them it seems the only way to attain their happiness. Are they right? Or wrong?

Dear Miss Martin:

I want to ask you a very serious question, and I hope you won't throw this in the waste basket, because my whole future, and that of the girl I love, will depend on what you have to say.

Maybe my question will shock you, but I feel sure that you will tell me what you honestly think about it.

You see both Rosa's folks and mine object to our getting married both because we haven't any money, and belong to different nationalities. Our parents seem to think it is a crime not to marry one of your own people.

THE GIRL'S PLAN

But we love each other so much that we just can't seem to get along without each other. We've been going together now for nearly three years, so we know each other pretty well, and we both feel sure that we are really in love, and that we can't get along separately. We would get married tomorrow if it weren't for those objections which seem silly to us. But we don't feel we could come out and openly defy our parents and get married, especially since neither of us makes much money.

Well, to make a long story short, Rosa has a plan. She says that we could live together without getting married. She insists that it would be just the same as really being married, so long as we really and truly love each other, and need each other so much.

Do you think that would work? Somehow I don't like the idea myself.

Please tell me what you think. Are so many people living like that, nowadays? And would it work for us? We would save all the money we could, and try to overcome our parents' objections so we can marry officially later on. Please answer soon. We'll be waiting to hear what you have to say. JOE.

So Rosa wants to go in for Free Love, does she? What's wrong with her, son? Why does she want to two-time herself? Why does she want to cut herself—and you—away from the clean-cut, worth-while people of the world?

Sure there are people who live that way—and kid themselves that they're being courageous and free. And they may be able to convince themselves that they are—for a while. But not for long. Soon they come to realize, no matter how bold a front they may put on, that there are places they are forever shut out of . . . friendships they can never have . . . that they must dodge around corners, face gossip, snubs, sneers and ridicule when they're found out. And that fear of being found out haunts them, son, even if they never are discovered. And few of them escape it, for this world is small.

A TRAGIC JOKE

The term "Free Love," is a tragic joke, son. There is no more bitter slavery on earth than the bondage of those who must sneak and cheat.

So I say no! No! No! No! Don't do it. Don't condemn yourself to picking your friends from the trash of the gutter. If you can't stand up, now, and acknowledge your love before the world—wait. Wait and work for the time when you can! For if you don't, you'll never know real happiness.

You'll begin to suspect her soon. You won't think of her as your wife. You will think of her as a mistress—a woman who sold herself cheaply. And inevitably, you'll say to yourself, "If she is a woman of easy virtue with me, she'll be a woman of easy virtue with any man."

And then you'll begin to spy on her and accuse her of unfaithfulness. When the world discovers your secret and openly scorns you, you'll each begin to blame the other. And love will go by the board. Life together will become unbearable. You'll split up. The chances are you'll hate each other. Living together without wedlock has been tried countless times, and it has never brought happiness yet.

Women Add Gentleness and Beauty to the World, Asserts Fay King

A FEMININE TOUCH BRIGHTENS UP A DINGY OFFICE
A HOME WILL ALWAYS BE A WOMAN'S BEST BACKGROUND
NEATNESS AND WOMANLY GOOD TASTE CAN IMPROVE ANY SURROUNDINGS
FAY. KING

By FAY KING

It is a woman's birthright to add gentleness and beauty to the world.

And she generally does. I have observed that no matter how unfortunate her lot in life may be, or into what sordid surroundings she may have stumbled, she will somehow add a touch of brightness to that place she calls home.

It may be only a cheap, fresh curtain fluttering at a well-cleaned window, or a bit of gay shelf paper, or 10 cents' worth of flowers in an empty jar, but it is an expression of her innate womanly charm.

Whatever her failings or faults, she is still a woman worthwhile if she takes pride in improving her surroundings with a womanly taste for neatness and a bit of beauty.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Edith's Gift to Dicky Almost Spoils Madge's Day.

If Dicky suddenly had inverted a pitcher of cold water over me, I could not have been more taken aback than I was by this reception of my Christmas present to him. I had spent a good deal of time and thought—and more money than I could afford—in the selection of his gift, a warm interlined lounging robe of heavily embroidered Chinese silk, the background dark blue, the heavy embroidery of scarlet and gold. With Dicky's fastidious tastes in my mind, I had spent much time in the selection, so that the coloring should not be too vivid, and yet give the effect of luxury which I know he likes in his intimate garments, but in which he rarely indulges himself. With them I had included a pair of slippers of soft leather, and the best workmanship, and a pipe which Harry Underwood had selected, at my request, for I would not trust my own judgment in selecting anything in smoking gifts. All three were articles which he needed, his old ones were worn—distinctly shabby, and I had anticipated with almost childish delight, his pleased face when he should open the gift. But the consternation in his face, and his dismayed exclamation, stripped me of all pleasure and made me falter apprehensively.

"What was it surprised you when you opened it?"

"Why! because I liked it so much and didn't expect—

"No, I'll be damned if I'll lie to you. But I don't know what you're going to say. Wait here a minute for me, will you?"

He hurried out of the room, and I sat, wondering, before the fire, until he came back, one hand and arm carefully held behind him.

"This is the darndest mixup," he said, his face reddening. "I don't know what possessed her, but well—here!—" he suddenly brought his arm from behind his back. "Ede sent me this today for Christmas."

Over his arm depended a crimson lounging robe of quilted silk with narrow lines of embroidery outlining collar and cuffs and hem. It did not approach mine in texture or beauty of the embroidery—it was a much cheaper robe throughout, but that was not the thought which was flaming before my jealous eyes, and which I knew was bringing an embarrassing brick-red finish even to Dicky's neck and ears—the knowledge that this gift of a lounging robe was one which might be expected from a wife, a mother, or other feminine relative, but which was altogether too intimate a gift to be presented to a married man by his feminine office partner.

I wondered what Dicky would say if I yielded to the primitive impulses rioting within me, urging me to seize the robe and thrust it into the flames.

He could not logically object to such an act, I told myself grimly, with the remembrances of the exquisite silver and glass flower container brought me by Philip Veritzen which Dicky had hurled into the fire in an apparent accident that I was sure had been premeditated. But I know only too well that one of my most effective weapons with Dicky is my calm under stress, so I sternly put down all trace of chagrin, and inquired naively: "Did she send you slippers and a pipe, too, Dicky?"

He stared at me for the fraction of a second, and then with a burst of laughter he rolled up the crimson lounging robe into a careless ball and tossed it into a neighboring chair.

"If you had what you deserve, you impudent little—word-forbidden-by-censor," he growled, "you'd be playing an accompaniment to the 'dog and the walnut tree.' But, the laws of the land protect you, unfortunately. Now you stay where you're put for a minute."

He took off his coat and waistcoat and put on the robe I had given him, stooped to his shoes and changed them for his slippers. The pipe he reluctantly deposited upon the mantel, and then with a firm hold upon my wrist he seated himself again in the big chair and drew me down upon his lap.

"Shut your eyes and hold out your hand, for your Christmas present," he directed.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Disturbance of Thyroid Gland.

About 100 years ago an eminent physician named Graves was the first to describe a disturbance of the thyroid gland. In honor of this man and in appreciation of his classical work, the name "Graves' disease" still attaches to this ailment. It is similar to the condition referred to as "exophthalmis goiter."

Dr. Copeland

Any enlargement of the thyroid gland is called goiter. This gland is located in the front of the neck, associated with "Adam's apple."

The victim of the so-called exophthalmic goiter usually presents marked exophthalmos. By this is meant large and protruding eyeballs.

The presence of this sign alone does not necessarily imply that Graves' disease is the cause. Many individuals with large and protruding eyeballs inherit this deformity. It is often a family trait.

A rapid pulse, excessive perspiration, loss of weight, bulging eyeballs and enlarged thyroid gland are more positive findings of this condition. When all these symptoms appear, they prove pretty conclusively that this disease is present.

With the enlargement of the thyroid gland there is an increase in the normal secretion of the gland. It is a substance called "thyroxin." The excessive amount of thyroxin acts as a stimulating drug would, producing the rapid pulse and overactive body function.

The diagnosis of this condition is easily confirmed. The scientific tests distinguish Graves' disease from other similar diseases. Such methods of confirming or disproving the condition were not known in the days of Dr. Graves.

Surgery is often resorted to for the relief of goiter. The advances made in the surgery of the thyroid gland have been tremendous. Operation upon this structure is no longer feared.

Knowledge of this disease has greatly advanced since it was first described. A means of prevention has not yet been found. Already much suffering and untold anguish have been eliminated. It is believed that in time this disease may be prevented.

Household Hints

Ribbons and delicately figured silks are best preserved in brown paper wrappings. The lime in white paper will bleach them.

If starched clothes are caught in a sudden downpour of rain, do not take them down. If they are allowed to remain hanging they will retain their original stiffness.

After opening the vacuum packed coffee can, unwind the key and put it in the dresser drawer. One of these times, when a can of coffee comes minus the key, you will be grateful for your foresight.

To remove shine from black silk, dissolve one ounce of rock ammonia and one-half cake of white Castile soap in a pint of hot water; when dissolved, dip a small sponge in the solution and gently rub the shiny spots.

If dust-clothes are to perform their duties well, they must be washed frequently. If not very soiled the dirt will come out easily—and, if they aren't kept clean, they will leave as much dirt on the surface as they take up.

Use only luke-warm water with a very little mild soap or soap flakes dissolved in it for washing chamois; rub it in the hands until clean, then rinse in two or three luke-warm waters; squeeze—do not wring it—and hang in the sun. When nearly dry, rub it between the hands so it will not dry stiff.

If you will make hot starch with soapy water you will find that it gives a gloss to the linen and prevents the iron sticking to the surface of the article.

DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND says:

"If you prize your comfort and efficiency, you will not neglect your feet . . . you will clothe them only in the best fitting of shoes . . . they are vastly more important than other clothing.

"Unless your feet are properly shod, your usefulness is materially lessened."

Marriage Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I was left an orphan when I was 10 years old and since that time I have been living with my grandmother, my father's mother. I also have a brother who is 16 years old. Could you tell me how the invitations are to be printed? It will be a church wedding and the reception will be held in a hall. Would it be proper to say:

Mrs. A. Manning wishes to announce the marriage of her granddaughter . . .

Clarence Manning wishes to announce the marriage of his sister . . .

2. Or would it be better for my fiance's parents to be mentioned first? G. P.

1. It would be far better, indeed the most natural thing for you to do, to have your grandmother sponsor your invitations. Especially since you have lived with your grandmother, and since your brother is so young. This is the form:

Mrs. Arthur Henry Manning requests the honor of your presence at the marriage of her granddaughter
Grace Hayes Manning
to
Mr. Thomas Robinson on Tuesday, the tenth of June at four o'clock
United Church
Chicago, Illinois

2. Marriage invitations are issued in the name or names of some member of the bride's family. The names of the groom's parents do not appear on this invitation.

Acknowledging Kind Deeds

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My father passed on. He received some beautiful flowers as well as spiritual bouquets. The neighbors made cakes, pies and doughnuts and brought them to the house. Also people let us have the use of their cars. Now we are going to write each one a personal note of thanks. Do you think this is best? Rather than sending printed cards of thanks?

2. Would you please write a note or two which would express our appreciation? You have a way of doing that. You see we read your articles every day. READER.

1. Your letter was such an especially charming one, and so sincere, that I should like to give you special thanks for it.

And I am so glad that you have decided to write personal notes, rather than send the cold, bleak, ready-made cards that give the receiver such a chill when she or he receives one in acknowledgment or such friendly gestures as you name.

2. Your notes need not be long, of course, and they need not be punctual—just a sentence or two, filled with the spirit of appreciation. Maybe like this:

Dear Mary:

You were most kind, most thoughtful, to send us such a beautiful expression of sympathy, and we were all deeply touched by your friendliness and your understanding. Thank you, most appreciatively.

Most sincerely yours,

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

When a henna pack is applied to hair that is a mixture of brown and white, it turns the white hairs red. Henna should never be used on hair that has been bleached for a long time, the result will be an orange-carroty hue. There is danger in applying one hair dye atop another. No telling what combined chemicals will do. They often fight.

Picky people who howl down the modern girl see with only half an eye, and maybe with only half a mind. Dwelling upon the horror of lipsticks, they don't notice that the young woman of today laughs at affectations, has forgotten how to cry, that she swims, runs a car, wears sensible clothing, gets out and earns her living. Her frank conversation is to be preferred to the simpering near innocence and "ain't it awful?" attitude of other times. To our way of thinking the modern girl is a grand institution. Long may she wave!

Bending exercises will rob hips and thighs of those excess cushions of adipose tissue that make one sick at heart while yearning for slimness. Lift up on the toes, at the same time flinging the arms above the head. Bring hands down to the floor without bending the knees. Repeat. The lift on the toes is important.

Everybody loves old shoes. Misplaced confidence. Slippers that have slithered sidewise, fallen into a state of wreckage are harmful, productive of foot ills that dig frowns in pretty faces. A shoe should be a support. It's center portion should extend upward with sufficient snugness to keep the instep in proper form and position. The shape of the foot changes according to the kind of leather casing it wears. It is economy to be well-shod, to select footwear with care, and with an eye for comfort as well as appearance.

STRONG FINGERS SECRET OF CONTROL

WHEN A PITCHER who has done effective work during the first part of a ball game loses his mastery over the opposition and begins to take a hammering in the late innings, the spectators usually conclude that his throwing muscles are tiring. But according to Dazzy Vance, the veteran Robin ace, that isn't the explanation at all. The trouble is in the fingers, not in the arm, Vance says. The pitcher's effectiveness leaves him because his fingers are tiring. He is not maintaining his grip and the ball is getting away from him.

Dazzy Vance

In discussing the subject with Tom Holmes, Dazzy explained that for effective pitching a man's shoulders, biceps, forearm, wrist and fingers must work together. He says there is a sharp division of duty at the elbow. Above the elbow is a pitcher's power. Below the elbow is his control. Strong fingers constitute the real secret of control, the Brooklyn star reveals. If the fingers are not capable of hanging on while the upper arm is applying the power, the hurler loses control, and with the loss of control his effectiveness fades.

VANCE BELIEVES HE would still be pitching for Pittsburgh had his fingers possessed in his early slab days the strength they have now. It was because he lacked control that the Pirates dropped him after looking him over in 1914, and it was for the same reason that the Yankees cast him adrift after two tryouts in 1915 and 1916. It took him six years in the minors to develop the required finger strength.

"I had as much speed then as I had at any time later on," Dazzy says, "but a batter was taking his life in his hands every time he stepped up to hit against me. I guess I dusted off more batters accidentally than any other pitcher who ever lived. I didn't know where the ball was going. Until I got strong fingers I had no control, and that goes for any other pitcher."

THE FATAL WEAKENING of Charley Ruffing in the ninth inning against Cleveland yesterday, when he had allowed only one hit in eight frames and had Wes Ferrell on the verge of defeat, brought the fourth straight reverse for the Yankee flinger and demonstrated again that Joe McCarthy's club is being held up only by its lefthanded pitchers.

The record of Gomez, Wells, Pennock and Weinert, lefthanders, shows 12 victories and six defeats to date, a percentage of .667, while Johnson, Sherid, Ruffing, Pipgras, Weaver and McEvoy, righthanders, have won only 13 games against 14 lost, percentage .481.

JIMMY LEVEY, Pittsburgher and former marine, now playing a smooth game at shortstop for the St. Louis Browns, got away from John McGraw through such a trivial item as a pair of baseball shoes. While Levey was playing for the Quantico Marines, McGraw invited him to visit Boston, where the Giants were playing, for a tryout. Levey reported without equipment, and when he tried to borrow a pair of shoes from some of the Giant players they only gave him the laugh. That decided Levey. "To heck with the New York club," he said, and went straight back to the Marines, where the Browns found him later.

Waite Hoyt

A ONCE NOTED pitcher and star money performer who apparently is nearing the end of his string, is Waite Hoyt, of the Tigers. His continued poor showing has strengthened a report that the Detroit club will cut him loose at the end of this season, if not earlier.

It was figured by baseball men that the shift from the Yankees to the Tigers would throw Hoyt back into a winning gait, but he appears to be going from bad to worse. He hasn't won a game since May 14, has been defeated five times in succession and has pitched only one complete game in his last six starts.

ONE OF THE main factors in the drive that is keeping Birmingham out in front in the Southern Association pennant race is Shine Cortazzo. The little shortstop, always a great fielder, is adding a steady punch to his defensive brilliance this year.

Cortazzo has done a lot of hopping around in the last half-dozen campaigns. In addition to getting two trials with the Chicago White Sox, he played for Cumberland and Johnstown in the Middle Atlantic League and then with Toledo, Nashville and Minneapolis. He appears to have found himself since joining Birmingham, and his work has had much to do with keeping that club in first place. In a recent hitting streak he batted safely in 10 straight games.

THE VARSITY AND freshman rowing races between the University of Washington Huskies and the Marietta College crews at Marietta this evening, the first intercollegiate contests of the kind ever held in Ohio, may open an era of boat racing in this part of the country. Though the colleges of the region, particularly the three big Pittsburgh schools, have splendid natural facilities for the sport, they have steadily failed to take it up. Perhaps they have needed only a leader and an example, in which case the Washington-Marietta races on the Ohio River today may prove the beginning of a college rowing boom that will eventually embrace the entire district.

IN CAPTURING FIVE of the eight places for the national open in the qualifying round at Oakmont, while competing in a field of professionals and amateurs that included representatives of six states, Western Pennsylvania golfers, headed by Dutch Loeffler, did a fine day's work and strengthened district hopes for a creditable showing at Toledo next month.

It was with deep regret that the gallery observed Eddie Towns forced to play the role of a spectator instead of that of a contestant, as in earlier days. Ten years ago, when he was at Shannopin, and later, the popular pro was a consistent qualifier for the national open, but broken health has compelled him to withdraw from the sport in which he once ranked among the acknowledged leaders in these parts.

OF COURSE, THERE was nothing surprising about the result itself when Jamestown won the Colin Purse at Belmont Park yesterday, as he had figured to win easily in a field of only three starters. But the way he did it was impressive.

Justo Suarez

It was his first race beyond a mile, and in doing the mile and an eighth in 1:52 on a muddy track the Widener colt made himself look more dangerous than ever as an opponent of Twenty Grand in the Belmont Stakes next Saturday. Twenty Grand still looks to have the edge on proved endurance, but it promises to be a two-horse race for the story books.

THE BOUT BETWEEN Billy Petrolle and Justo Suarez at Madison Square Garden in New York on June 25 will be not only a test to determine the full possibilities of the gradually advancing Suarez and the form of Petrolle after the beating the latter took from Jimmy McLarnin, but also a test of indoor boxing in New York during the summer months. The promoters say that outdoor cards strong enough to fill the ball parks do not exist. There are some which they believe would pack the Garden if staged during the winter season, but whether these will draw paying crowds indoors in summer is another question. That's what the Garden people hope to find out on the occasion of the Petrolle-Suarez show. If it is a success other pretentious indoor bills will be offered during July and August, but the promoters will have to be assured of better financial returns than they got out of the Vince Dundee-Ben Jeby show last week, which drew only $8,700.

The second Homewood-Dormont City League contest in as many evenings tops the sandlot baseball program for the district this evening. A full and interesting schedule awaits the pleasure of the fans.

Last evening, at Dormont, Homewood lost a 9-to-2 decision to the South Hills entry and dropped from first place in the league. By winning this evening, at Homewood, Heinie Boll's charges can regain the leadership, which they will be hot favorite to hold for the rest of the first-half chase. The same goes for Dormont if they can repeat last evening's decisive triumph.

Leo Carroll and McFarland are expected to duel this evening.

The Homestead Grays play the North Side Civics at the Salt Works grounds on the North Side.

GRIFFINS FACE TEST

EXPLANATION OF RIPLEY CARTOON OF YESTERDAY: DANIEL M'CARTNEY, MENTAL MARVEL—During his lifetime, McCartney performed numerous astounding mental feats, such as increasing 89 to the sixth power in 10 minutes, quoting Bible references and various accomplishments of memory. He could remember everything he had had to eat each day and the kind of weather every day of his life since childhood. A story of McCartney's unique ability is contained in the Cleveland Leader of April 19, 1871, and verified by his grandson, D. W. Cass, of 1087 West Eleventh street, Cleveland.

SCOTTIES LOSE TWIN BILL

Scottdale lost valuable ground yesterday as it opened its series with the league leading Cumberland Colts in the Middle Atlantic League. The second placers dropped both ends of a doubleheader yesterday, losing, 2 to 1, and, 4 to 3. The Scotties outhit the Colts in both games.

Chaarleston nosed out Hagerstown, 4 to 3, in another game in which the losers outhit the victors, and in a fourth such fray, Johnstown battered out 14 hits against Huntington, only to lose by a 9-to-5 score.

Other games on the schedule were rained out or postponed because of wet grounds.

Time of game—3:30 p. m.

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Restless after two days of idleness, the rank and file of the Pirates and Phillies today were eager for diamond action. The Oakland Orchard being damp yesterday the second game of the series was postponed. The series is due to come to a close this afternoon. Ervin Brame and Clise Dudley, a pair of fast-ball righthanders, are down on the books as the opening sharpshooters.

The clash of the Quakers and Buccos brings a position struggle which is anything but a proud boast on the part of the Pirates. It is very unusual, indeed, for a Pirate team to be fighting for sixth place in the National League; the Dreyfuss entry is generally in the thick of the flag fight, so the less said about the sixth-place stuff, the better for the feelings of all concerned, including the fans.

SCRAP FOR LEAD

On the other hand the race has scarcely started. Rather the best teams appear to be jockeying for position as they face the hot and strenuous battles that are sure to develop as the July and August milestones are reached. Manager Ens and Owner Dreyfuss have not given up hope of finishing in the first division, although they are plainly nonplussed by the batting slump which has overtaken practically every member of the club.

The flagging baseball interest in Pittsburgh is likely to receive an impetus tomorrow when John J. McGraw leads his colorful Giants into the city. The Polo Grounders will be in the city for the remainder of the week, four battles being on the card.

The fast-going Men of McGraw were slowed down to a second-division pace in St. Louis and Chicago. It was predicted they would find some rocky roads this side of the mountains and these prophecies have been bearing fruit.

GIANTS NEED HURLER

Give McGraw one more pitcher capable of winning regularly and John J.'s flag aspirations would be appreciably enhanced. The great pilot has many boosters who think he will be able to surmount the slab obstacle owing to his leadership and his brilliant combination of hustlers. But his pitchers will have to show a lot of stuff to bring the Giants through on top.

The New Yorks have won only two games in seven clashes with the Cardinals and Cubs. Their performances thus would indicate they were fooling around with some pretty tough boys in the West. Naturally the Pirates would relish a continuance of this treatment of the Giants as they sojourn in Pittsburgh.

Schenley Matinee Races Tomorrow

The Schenley Matinee Club will hold its second program of the season tomorrow afternoon at Schenley Oval. The program follows:

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

Nick Altrock

WASHINGTON, June 9.—I don't blame my fellow essayist, Calvin Coolidge, for giving up the daily column business. The strain is something awful. Think what a gruelling task your Uncle Nick has getting out this daily dispatch. Suppose we are playing the A's. Right away I have to cudgel my brains to see if you spell Philadelphia with an "F." Then, on account of getting two cents a word up to 100 words, I have to keep the essay short so I won't cheat myself. By this time I'm a nervous wreck. But I am open to propositions and if I thought I had a chance to be nominated vice president next year I'd quit writing this column right now.

INDIANS BEAT YANKS, NEAR THIRD PLACE

South Hills, Schenley Resume Play for City League Title Today

GIANTS STOP CUBS; NATS, A'S WIN

Associated Press.

Charles Rufus Ruffing, of the Yankees, saw enough of the Cleveland Indians within about five minutes late yesterday afternoon to last him the rest of his natural life. If the readhead never sees Roger Peckinpaugh's wreckers again, it doubtless will suit him fine.

They disappointed Mr. Ruffing sorely. For eight innings they were so docile he was almost ashamed to take the money. During that interval they obtained just one single. The Yanks, meantime, had grouped two of their three hits off Wes Ferrell to score a run in the fifth.

WIN IN NINTH

The Indians jumped the reservation in the ninth. Dick Porter started it with a triple, whereupon Johnny Hodapp delivered a single that brought him in. Earl Averill belted a homer, and before the uprising subsided Morgan had drawn a walk and loped in on Myatt's triple. That was how it ended, 4 to 1, and the Indians had moved within a game of third place.

Lefty Grove and Jimmy Foxx divided honors as the Athletics mauled the Detroit Tigers again, 7 to 3. Grove, allowing seven hits, four of them by Mark Koenig, became the first pitcher in either league to register 10 victories this year. Foxx led the champions' assault on Earl Whitehill with a brace of homers and a single.

Walt Stewart southpawed the Boston Red Sox into submission, 4 to 0, pulling the Browns out of the American League cellar.

MITCHELL BEATS CUBS

An eight-run outburst in the second inning featured Washington's 18-to-4 win over the Chicago White Sox.

The New York Giants won their second victory out of seven starts in the West, when Clarence Mitchell set the Cubs down, 6 to 1. Mitchell, who, incidentally, pitched his team's other win, allowed five hits, two of the scratch variety.

YANKEES QUIT FRENCH OPEN

DEAUVILLE, France, June 9.—(AP.)—Andre Boyer, Nice professional, and Rene Golias, of the Four Queux Club, near Paris, led the early finishers in the French open golf championship today, with 71s, a course record.

Mario Churio and Tomasco Genta, two of the four Argentine golfers entered, were tied for second place, at 73.

Some of the international interest in the tournament was taken away with the scratching of Horton Smith, who won the French professional competition two years ago, and Johnny De Paolo, Los Angeles amateur.

Joe Kirkwood and Willie Hunter, American professionals, and J. H. Forsman, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., remained to represent the United States in the tourney.

Kirkwood had a 74, placing him well up in the list on his first round.

MARIETTA CREW ROWS HUSKIES

By JESS CARVER

Intercollegiate rowing makes its debut in this district today. The powerful varsity and freshmen crews of the University of Washington, the famous Huskies, which have won, as often almost as not, the I. R. A. regatta at Poughkeepsie, are assisting Marietta College's Pioneers in inaugurating varsity rowing with a pair of two-mile brushes at Marietta today.

Coach Al Ulbrickson, of the Huskies, and J. Ellis MacDonald, mentor at Marietta, were boatmates at Washington during undergraduate days. It was through Coach MacDonald that the Huskies were prevailed upon to stop off at Marietta on their way to Poughkeepsie.

Marietta is the only school in this territory boasting a crew. The Pioneers took up rowing this year, and placed third in a race with Harvard and Penn in Philadelphia a month ago.

For Pittsburghers who make the trip down the Ohio, an observation train will leave the B. & O. station in Marietta at 5 o'clock to follow the freshman race. It will return for the varsity event an hour later.

The Tipoff

There was quite a gathering of alumni at Wash-Jeff yesterday. The occasion was the annual Alumni Day of Commencement week, and the boys of other years held sort of a clinic on the Wash-Jeff athletic situation.

According to my informant, it was agreed upon informally, that unless radical changes are brought about soon, the future of sports at Wash-Jeff will be gloomy indeed. And it has not been any too bright during the past two or three years.

The annual meeting of the alumni association is scheduled for today. The association, as a body, is not expected to take any formal action, on the athletic situation, but those close to the pulse of the Red and Black institution have indicated that leading groups of the alumni at large are certain to set forth some informal recommendations.

Pitt plans to go back to a one-color football uniform next fall. A plain blue jersey, with gold numbers, fore and aft, likely will be worn for home games, with a gold jersey with blue numbers on the road.

DORMONT COPS LOOP LEAD

Dormont took possession of first place in the City League last evening by capturing the first of the two-game series with Homewood. Playing on their own back lot, the South Hills nine slugged out a 9-to-2 decision. Abe Martin kept Homewood's eight hits well scattered, while Steele and Quigley were slugged for 11, which were bunched.

The N. S. Buicks defeated J. L. Thomas, 8 to 4, and Book Shoe nosed out the Civics, 8 to 7, in other league frays.

In the West Penn League, Swissvale scored a 1-0 win over the Griffins, the second time the Hill team has been beaten by such a score this year.

Edgewood took the Wally Smiths, 6-2; Fintex upset Whitaker, 6-5, and Jenkins defeated North Bessemer, 6-3, in Greater Pittsburgh League frays. In the Central loop, Colteryahn defeated the Rhynes, 4 to 2.

The Methodists won over the Crafton Presbyterians, 6 to 2, in the Crafton-Ingram Church League and in the C. & I. circuit, Reliance Life crushed the Coalers, 7 to 2. The D. J. Brodericks defeated St. Joseph's Protectory, 9 to 2.

Reserve to Sign Tom Keady, Report

CLEVELAND, June 9.—(AP.)—J. T. (Tom) Keady, one time Dartmouth star and now coach of the Quantico Marines, today was mentioned as the most likely candidate to become head football coach at Western Reserve University.

It was learned that Keady was the choice of several influential members of the athletic committee. Previously it had been understood Reserve wanted Andy Kerr, Colgate's famous mentor, after he finished his present contract this year, but Kerr failed to send any notice as requested last week.

In the City League, the Book Shoemen will clash with Johnny Dunsky's North Side Buicks. The Buicks have not given up the idea of beating out Dormont and Homewood, but taking Book Shoe is tough problem for any club.

Fans up the Monongahela River will see Hynock the new pitching sensation, in action for Patton against Van Vooris. Hynock has been averaging 12 strikeouts per game.

The Homestead Grays meet the North Side Civics in an independent game on the Civics' field.

EMIL LOEFFLER LEADS OPEN QUALIFIERS

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

On to Inverness! Emil Loeffler, of Oakmont; Sam Parks, Jr., Highland amateur; Ted Luther, of Corry, Pa., West Penn open champ; Freddie McLeod, of Chevy Chase, Md.; Perry Delvicchio, of Greensburg; J. Munro Hunter, of Silver Springs, Md.; Jack Cawsey, of Jacksonville, Fla., and Johnny Capebianco, of Edinboro, Pa., yesterday earned the right to make the trip to the national open championship, to be held at the Toledo course, July 2 to 4, by besting a field of 90 star amateurs and professionals in a 36-hole sectional qualifying test at the Oakmont Country Club.

Emil Loeffler

Loeffler the veteran shotmaker who has never been beaten in an individual match by either Walter Hagen or Gene Sarazen, came into his own for the first time in several years, scoring consistently through a day of changing weather, and struggling through a gallery in the afternoon that numbered almost 1,000, by recording a 73 and then a 75 to grab a 148 low medal tally that was four strokes better than his nearest competitor.

SAM PARKS SECOND

Sam Parks, Jr., captain of the Pitt golf team, who has qualified for national play in the past, and invariably either at the top or among the leaders of players from this section, was the only amateur to make the difficult grade, and his pair of 76s was as good golf as Oakmont has seen in many a day.

Ted Luther, of Corry, West Penn kingpin, was two strokes to the rear of Parks, with 81 and 73, while Freddie McLeod, noted Chevy Chase tutor, ranked next with 155, on his cards of 81 and 74. Two were tied at 156, Perry Delvicchio, of Greensburg, who apparently got started too soon, on a rain-drenched course in the morning was out in 35—only to blow up and take 46 in for an 81; his 75 with Loeffler in the afternoon was fine. Perry was deadlocked with J. Munro Hunter, of Silver Springs, Md., one of the longest drivers in the country. Hunter followed his 81 of the morning with a fine 76.

CAPEBIANCO GETS 157

Johnny Capebianco, of Culbertson Hills, Edinboro, showed the world the sort of good golf a little player can produce when he went out in the morning to bag a 75, and follow it up with an easy 82 round in the afternoon for a 157, which tied him with Jack Cawsey, who signs himself from Jacksonville, Fla., but who is the pro at Chautauqua Lake. Cawsey had an 81 and a 76.

All of the qualifiers announced their intention of competing in the big fight for Bobby Jones' undefended crown.

DUKE NETTERS PLAY ALUMNI

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The final stand of varsity tennis here for 1931 is on the card for this afternoon with Capt. Andy Smeaton and his Duke undergraduate followers primed for battle against a strong troupe of oldtime Hill racquet performers under the guidance of Sam Keller and Jake Olko. The contest is billed for the Bluff asphalt at 2 p. m. and will constitute an important feature of the extensive sport program arranged for the annual Duquesne University Alumni Day celebration.

A widely varied program of sports will occupy attention of Dukes of other years as scores of former Hilltoppers assemble on the Bluff for active participation in the annual celebration. General Chairman Joe McAteer, with the assistance of Athletic Director Elmer Layden and Joe Bach, has arranged a card of festivities calculated t appeal to all sorts of competitive tastes.

CHAMPS NEED WIN TO STAY IN FIGHT

South Hills High School's peppery Section II baseball team can drag down the City League championship for 1931 by winning a ball game this evening. The game is the second of the annual play-off series, the opponents being the defending champions, Schenley, of Section I.

Last week, after playing a 2-2 tie in the first game, on Tuesday, the Tunnelites nosed out the Bellefielders, 4 to 3, on Friday. On that occasion Bill Lentz outpitched another crack right-hander, Earl Stratton. These two slab artists will square off again this evening.

South Hills shook up its batting order for the second fray on Friday, and the new arrangement, which functioned very well, is expected to get another trial this evening. Schenley anticipated no changes.

In the event a fourth game is necessary, it will be played Friday evening. Tonight's tussle will get under way promptly at 6 o'clock at Forbes Field.

By HARRY KECK

A boxing and a wrestling show vie for the patronage of the sports fans in the Pittsburgh district tonight as a result of the postponement of the weekly mitt card in the Meyers Bowl, North Braddock, last night because of the threatening weather.

Meyer Frager.

The boxing bouts, with Jackie Brady, of Syracuse, and Baby Joe Gans, of New York, leading welterweights, in the 10-round windup, remain intact for tonight. The wrestling card will be staged at Hickey Park, Millvale, as per schedule, with five events listed. Tiny Roebuck, Choctaw Indian, and Vanka Zelesniak, Russian, heavyweights, top the latter bill.

LAWLESS AT RINGSIDE

Bucky Lawless, of Auburn, N. Y., a favorite here, will be at the ringside of the boxing show to look over the principals in the main bout with the idea of taking on the winner at an early date.

Marty Gornick, Whitaker's promising young lightweight, meets Al Ghan, of Columbus, O., in the eight-round semi-final. Carl Montebano, of Braddock, and Mickey Solomen, of Youngstown, middleweights, are in the second bout, and Anson Green, Negro, of Homestead, and Carl Cesko, Uniontown middleweight, will box the opener, with the show getting under way at 8:45. The boxers will weigh at the Bowl at 3 p. m. They did not scale yesterday, when the show was postponed at noon.

In the matter of big names, the preliminaries overshadow the two finish bouts of tonight's wrestling show. Hans Steinke, giant German, meets Dick Shikat, former claimant of the world championship, in one of them, while, in the other two, Rudy Dusek engages Floyd Marshall and Wladek Zbyszko grapples Mike Romano. All of these bouts will be limited to 30 minutes. Karl Pojello and Ivan Vacturoff are in the other finish match.

FRAGER TRAINS HERE

Meyer Frager, of Chicago, who meets Ray Collins, of Erie, in the semi-final of the all-star card of four eight-round bouts at Hickey Park, Thursday night, with Young Rudy and Tiger Joe Randall in the main event, already is in town working out for the battle. He is a former Chicago district amateur champion and has been a pro for a year. He has trained with Sammy Mandell and Jackie Fields, former world champions, to help along his fistic education.

12 AMATEURS MAKE OPEN

NEW YORK, June 9.—(AP.)—Twelve amateurs will be in the field seeking the national open golf championship, starting at the Inverness Club, Toledo, O., July 2.

The principal hopes among the simon-pures will be George Voigt and T. Philip Perkins, of New York, the latter a former British amateur champion. The other amateurs who have gained a place in the field are George Dawson and Johnny Lehman, of Chicago; Lester Bolstad, of St. Paul; Tom Cooley, of Tucson, Ariz.; Johnny Fischer, of Fort Thomas, Ky.; Paul Jackson, Kansas City; Joe Pazzullo, of Wanumetonomy, R. I.; Chester O'Brien and Bryan Winter, of St. Louis, and Sam Parks, Jr., of Pittsburgh.

Only 40 Per Cent of Real Estate Bonds Sound

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE AFTERMATH OF FRENZIED real estate financing is clearly depicted in the report of the real estate securities committee of the Investment Bankers Association made public today. This shows that in spite of warnings issued by the committee many banking houses completely disregarded conservative and time-tested standards for real estate financing during the past 10 years.

Unwise practices in the real estate bond field have had startling results. The report summarizes them as follows:

Out of about $10,000,000,000 of real estate mortgage securities in the hands of the public only $2,000,000,000 are in good standing with a good record. About $2,000,000,000 more appear to be able to work out of the present depression without foreclosure or loss. In other words, only about 40 per cent of the real estate securities will pull through without reorganizations or defaults.

Of the remaining 60 per cent, the committee estimates that $2,500,000,000 will suffer foreclosure with eventual losses ranging from 10 per cent to 25 per cent. The losses in $3,000,000,000 more will range from 25 to 60 per cent. This leaves securities amounting to about $500,000,000 on "incompleted, ill-conceived and misplaced buildings." Losses in this class will range from 6 per cent to 100 per cent.

Former Record Good

THIS STAGGERING RECORD of bad financing has put an almost complete check on real estate mortgage bond sales. Until three years ago this class of security was in exceptionally good standing.

The explanation of this sudden change is found in the collapse of the building boom and in the fact that most real estate mortgage bond issues covered the full value of the properties instead of from 50 to 60 per cent which was the rule under conservative mortgage practice.

In reviewing events leading to the collapse of real estate securities, the report states that the country found itself seriously underbuilt at the close of the war. This was followed by a period of active construction which reached its peak in 1926 and was accompanied by mounting building costs. Construction activity leveled off in 1927 and began to decline in 1928 as the saturation point became evident.

No Margin for Bonds

DURING THIS PERIOD rents continued to advance, reaching a maximum in the winter of 1924 and 1925 of 168 per cent of the 1914 base. During this period property values were capitalized on the basis of high rents and reached 194 per cent of the 1914 base. Mortgage investment houses deluded themselves and their customers in the belief that these rents and values were permanent.

The report declares:

"Crimes were committed in cheap construction and ill-conceived or misplaced buildings became the order of the day."

The law of supply and demand soon asserted itself. The country became overbuilt. Rents declined and the income from buildings slumped sharply.

If mortgage bond issues had been limited to 50 per cent of conservative property valuations, enough margin would have been provided to protect investors. With excessive financing, however, buildings were not able to carry their heavy fixed charges.

Reorganization Necessary

A GLOOMY PROSPECT for future building was indicated by the report which said that there will be little real estate financing done until the present situation has cleared and then only when borrowers can be found who are able to supply from 40 to 50 per cent of the construction costs.

The report then offers a definite plan and proposes that, where state laws permit, corporations be organized by substantial interests in leading cities to acquire distress income property. These corporations should have adequate, paid-in capital and holders of defaulted bonds should have a choice of selling their bonds to the corporation at a fair price or of exchanging bonds for 5 per cent preferred stock, each share of which would carry with it one share of common stock.

2 New Gas Wells in Dundee-Wayne Field

CORNING, N. Y., June 9.—Two gas wells were brought in yesterday in the Dundee-Wayne field. The Belmont Quadrangle Company's well on the Galek farm registered a 2,000,000-foot flow at 5½ feet in the sand.

The other well, also registering a 2,000,000-foot flow, was the Eastern States Company's project on the Brown farm, Wayne Village. The two wells make 42 wells in the Dundee-Wayne field with a total flow of 218,000,000 feet.

High Blood Pressure Shortens Life

Relief for high blood pressure and other health-destroying ailments that have kept thousands of sufferers in misery and doubt for years—is now seen in the modern discovery — BLOOD CELL PROTEIN SERUM.

The importance of this discovery cannot be denied when the life insurance companies refuse to issue policies to applicants with high blood pressure because it tends to shorten the span of life.

High blood pressure gives little warning, and until certain symptoms appear you are not aware of it. You may have head pains, hot flashes, flushed face, dizzy spells, shortness of breath, sleeplessness, nervousness and palpitation of the heart. Remember that HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE is a symptom and not a disease in itself—IT IS NATURE'S WARNING TO TAKE NOTICE.

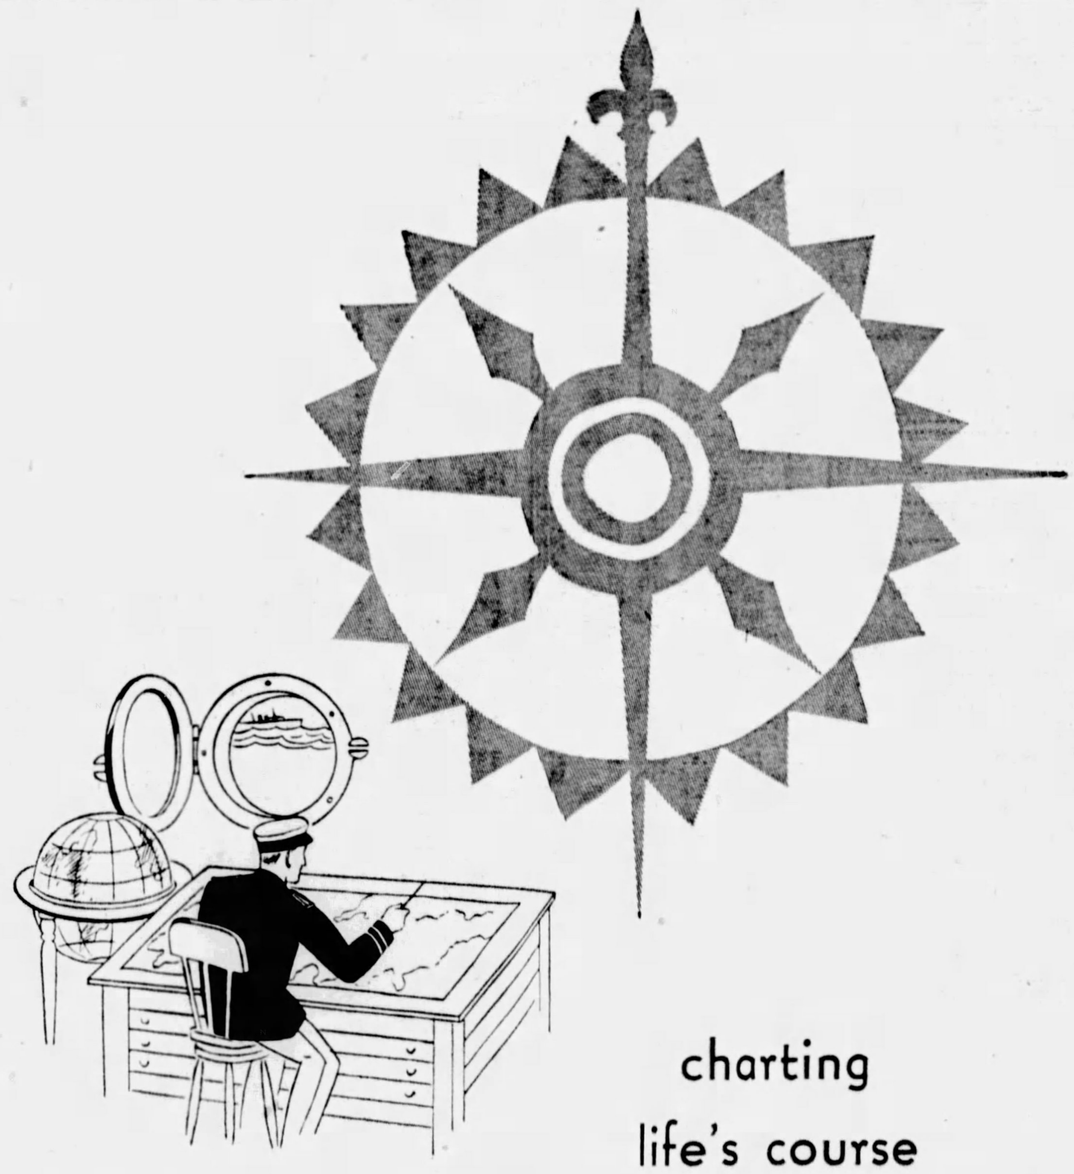

charting life's course

Like the captain or navigator of a ship, the successful man plans his career in advance . . . selects the shortest, safest route, takes advantage of favorable currents and winds, marks dangerous shoals, and charts his course accordingly. For the young man just leaving college or school, there is no better time to lay definite plans for a business or professional career. A friendly banking connection will go a long way toward the solution of the many financial problems that will occur again and again in the course of any career, and the earlier in life this connection is established, the firmer it will be when the needs of later years arise. The Mellon National Bank welcomes the account of the young business or professional man, regardless of its size.

SUCCESS IN RED INK YEAR GOES TO DARING

Courageous Executives Who Buck Trend Rather Than Rest on Oars Rewarded

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER

NEW YORK, June 9.—Successes in this red ink year are being made by executives who have the courage to buck conditions with redoubled energy, rather than to join the dismal chorus of bores who dwell passively on the obviously unfavorable economic factors.

Mr. Rukeyser

As a group, the power and light companies, whose representatives have assembled at Atlantic City for the annual convention of the National Electric Light Association, have done well. They have offset unavoidable decreases in the use of power for industrial purposes (on which profit margins are slim) by increases in the use of power in the homes on which the profit margins are wider). Thus it appears that the affluent and the gainfully employed, even during depressions, have continued to raise their living standards through increased use of electrical appliances.

SHOWS INCREASE

The Consolidated Gas, Electric Light and Power Company was among the superior profit makers, and showed an increase in net income in the first quarter compared with the corresponding period of 1930.

Asked to interpret these gains, Charles M. Cohn, executive of the company, told me:

"As you know, we supply all the gas and electric service in Baltimore. Increases in population and in the size of industries within the territory are necessarily reflected in the growth of a company such as ours. While it is true that the electric consumption of industries is 'off,' there has been a very satisfactory increase in the domestic electric consumption, due in part to increasing sales of electric refrigeration devices, radios and many other similar types of appliances. Our gas sales, which in the industrial lines have also been less than in 1930, have been materially aided by the increasing number of gas house-heating installments made possible in Baltimore by the existence of low gas rates. Economies in operation have been rigorously enforced in 1931 in order to offset decreased sales in those departments which have been affected by slack business.

SALES INCREASE

"You will perhaps be especially interested in knowing that our bulk sales of 'merchandise' (in reality, the numerous consuming appliances pertinent to the gas and electric industry), have, during the past four months, shown increases over 1930, which latter year itself showed a large increase over 1929. This has been due to intensive sales work on the part of our merchandise and appliance sales forces and certainly represents quite an achievement in view of existing conditions.

"Underlying reasons for the success of the consolidated company may be said to consist of, first, the gas and electric rates charged in Baltimore for domestic and industrial consumption, which are low; and, second, the great diversity of usage in our city, which tends to safeguard Baltimore from widespread depression conditions frequently found in cities where a preponderance of the population is engaged in one line of industry. These two favorable factors, plus an intense desire on the part of our organization to make the best of a slack business period, are proving reasonably effective."

Spectator

Statistics Favorable. Indicate Better Trend. June Often Turning Point.

—By Wall Street Spectator—

NEW YORK, June 9.

THERE CERTAINLY is no dearth of statistical data pointing to a genuine turning in the market before any great length of time.

For example, the monthly analysis of Moody's discloses that on June 1 the average yield on the 340 active cash-dividend-paying common stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange was 9.71 per cent, as against 8.58 per cent in the previous month.

The 9.71 per cent yield as of June 1 compares with 8.08 per cent on 428 stocks on November 13, 1929, and 9.50 per cent on 397 stocks at the middle of last December, former low points of the current bear movement.

OF GREATER significance, however, is the fact that the present yield differs but slightly from the peak of 9.92 per cent on August 24, 1921, the bottom of the depression period of a decade back.

In fact, according to this agency, current stock yields may be regarded as relatively higher in comparison with 1921, since the return on high grade bonds is much lower than 10 years ago.

According to observers who have studied closely the trend of the market for years, June has frequently marked a turning point marketwise.

IN A MAJORITY of the Junes of the past decade, substantial price recoveries have been started. While it is true these upturns ordinarily begin in the latter half of the month, the violence of the spring decline and the rapidity of the recovery may lead to a fluctuating market for a week or two, before going on an extended rise.

A year ago, the June recovery had spent itself before the end of July, but in several preceding years June lows formed the basis for rising summer markets.

Less Coal Loaded At Lake Ports

CLEVELAND, June 9.—Bituminous coal loaded into vessels at Lake Erie ports during May totaled 3,299,996 tons, compared to 6,101,863 tons in May, 1930. For the season to June 1 total loadings were 4,684,050 tons, against 8,039,898 tons in the like 1930 period.

Dividend Outlook For Sinclair Oil

NEW YORK, June 9.—Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation closed last year in strong current position, but in view of the unsatisfactory conditions in the oil industry and the adverse effect on earnings, there is some doubt as to the maintenance of the present rate on the common stock.

MARKET'S RISE AIDS AUTO OUTLOOK

Detroit Reports Current Stock Upturn Affected Sentiment Immediately

DETROIT, June 9. — The two most important influences in the motor situation at the moment are: (1) What Ford is going to do, and (2) the stock market. The reversal in stock market prices this week was an electrical stimulant to motor sales. Dealers say that salesmen began to take a renewed interest, and that dead prospects came to life almost the same day the market turned—but there remains as a bar to complete normalcy in the retail market, the ever-recurring question, "What is Ford Motor Company going to do?"

FORD'S PLANS

Contrary to all the rumors about an eight-cylinder car, and contrary to what a great many people expect, it can be stated with emphasis that no radical change in the Ford cars is in prospect this summer or fall.

It is true that there will be some changes in the Ford car later on in the year. The wheelbase may be lengthened two or three inches and there are sure to be refinements in the chassis and body. In fact, since the Model A was brought out in 1927 and without the public taking much notice of it there have been 200 of what the engineers call major, and more than 19,000 minor, changes in the details of the Model A.

CAR STOCKS LOW

What is going to happen to the whole industry if the stock market continues to rise and a wave of automobile buying follows is a horse of another color. Starting from a condition of the lowest inventories, both of materials and cars, in the history of the business and granting that the companies can get into production quickly, a pickup of one-half the usual July rebound from the June low points will create an ever-expanding ripple of activity in a thousand directions. The parts companies are probably on a much lower inventory basis than the producers.

Jennifer Discovers She Can Give Up Berry

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

CHAPTER XXVIII.

Berry ordered abruptly, without consulting Jennifer. She liked that. There was a great, straight seam horizontally across his brow. She tried to remember if it had ever been there in unbroken line before.

"Well," he said, and rubbed it, "this hasn't been what you would call a nice getaway. Too many lies."

How matter-of-fact he was, and hot-looking, as if he had perspired. Businessmen looked that way after a hard day. It made him appear like a big, rumpled boy. That softened her.

"You might have spared me this waiting around beneath a grilled mutton chop, Berry."

"Good Lord, Jennifer!" he said, and looked at her with incredulity in his big chiseled face. "Do you realize that I had a kid born a few days ago? Nine pounds, all to the good."

There was nothing to say to that, and so she stared with her palm up against where she felt her throat beating."

IMPULSE TO LAUGH

"It's a hell of a job getting born, Jennifer."

"Well, what do you expect me to do about it?"

"What do you expect one to do about it?"

They stared and stared across the catsup-bottle and the A-1 sauce and the jar of chutney. Stared as if they could never have done with staring.

"Look here, Jennif, make allowances."

"For what?"

"Good God! For the birth of a man's son."

"Berry, dear—"

"Jennifer, dear—"

"I'm dense."

"I'm—I'm—I guess I'm confused, Jennif."

She wanted to feel, and she was not feeling; so she spoke words that she felt she would have spoken had she been feeling.

"Dearest Berry, we've passed that milestone."

"Whew, yes!"

"We've never exactly discussed what then—but doesn't it seem to you like release, Berry? Like a release for us, now that it's over?"

"Where do you get that, Jennif?"

"She'll be back in normal health now—Leslie—"

"I see."

"There's no question of money. You've both so much."

"What the devil. . . ."

"What the devil?"

"Yes? What? I say, Jennifer, it is a hell of a job getting born."

"Well as I seem to have remarked before, what do you expect me to do about it?"

'Five and Ten' Synopsis

John G. Rarick, multi-millionaire chain store operator, buys a magnificent mansion after being urged by his wife, Jenny, and finds himself hating her. This is accentuated by his own inability to get close to Jennifer and Avery, his children. Jenny begins to be intrigued by Ramon Lopez, a gigolo. Avery, a college student, tires of school. Jennifer likes the handsome and rich Berry Rhodes, and Jenny urges her to try to win him. Berry kisses Jennifer while taking her to one of Leslie Edgerton's parties. Jennifer learns that Berry and Leslie had been married secretly. Ramon, saying that he has been neglecting his work to see Jenny, gets money from her. Rarick rushes to Jenny's boudoir after receiving a disturbing letter. The letter says that Jennifer is still seeing Berry. Jennifer says that she does not want to see him again. Jenny plans to go to Canada with her. Gerkes surprises Rarick by saying that he is going to marry an Eskimo and live in Alaska. Returning from Canada, Jenny and Jennifer are shocked when they learn Avery is dead. He had given up the struggle to adjust himself to his complex world and killed himself. Jenny turns to Ramon for comfort. Jennifer starts to see Berry again.

Now Go On

They were staring again, across the chutney, staring and staring in incredulity at each other. Simultaneously, the impulse to laugh smote them. A side-twisting, strangulating gust of it shook Jennifer, not hysterical, but what Berry later designated as an $11, orchestra-seat, below-the-belt laugh. He swept in on it. Waiters turned away to [illegible] their smiles behind [illegible].

"Oh! Oh!" gasped Jennifer, [illegible] asped herself at the right si[illegible] of her waist line.

"Good lord!" panted Berry, and kept wiping at his tears, and poking his handkerchief back into his breast pocket, and wiping his tears again and poking it back. "I've paid $11 an orchestra seat for a laugh that didn't come through like that. Whew! Now how do you think we got that way, Jennifer?"

MADE HIM HAPPY

"I don't know, Berry," she said, still laughing in a soft exhausted way.

"Give you my word, Jennif, I think we were laughing at us."

"I hope so, Berry. It will help me to seem funny to me."

"What about me?"

"I—I'm afraid all of a sudden you are funny to me, Berry—and that's fatal."

"To what?"

"Us."

"Us is a nice word, Jennifer, when applied to us."

"You don't mean that. You wish to God I'd let you be."

"Then what?"

"So you could settle down to being what you are at heart. A husband. A fast, rich, gay stockbroker on the side, who thinks girls were made to pinch and wives were made to have nine-pound sons. A father whose son is a miracle, chiefly because he resembles his daddy."

"Pretty picture."

"I hate it more than you do."

"Hang it, Jennif! I'll say it, even at the risk of bringing down that well-known scorn of yours—that kid, getting himself born as mine, gave me the kick of a lifetime."

"So it should, Berry."

"Hang it, Jennif. I'll say it again, even if I afford you the laugh of your life, that kid getting himself born as mine gave me the kick of a lifetime."

"I hope it's the only one he'll ever give you."

"Not nice."

"Sorry, Berry."

"Dear girl . . ."

"Don't say that, Berry."

"Now what?"

"Because it's as if—as if I lifted the words off this table and put them on your lips."

"You should have been a writer of fantasies."

"I'm a liver of them."

"Nothing fantastic about this mutton chop," he said, and slid a black-handled steel knife into the "specialty of the house."

"And I am expected to nibble boned breast of chicken with Hartley Slocum at seven," she said, slicing down, too, into mutton that flowed red.

"And me, breast-of-something-or-other with my mother-in-law, who will have many a bone to pick with me besides, if I'm late. Jennifer, ever see a new kid?"

WILL GIVE HIM UP

"Yes. They cause strong men to falter and bad girls to trek across the snow—"

"Damn it, I like my kid. Now what are you going to do about it?"

"I'm afraid, Berry, I'm going to be noble."

"God forbid!"

"I'm going to give you back to your wife and your chee-ild."

"But I don't want to be guv."

"You do. Only, this surreptitious thing on the side with me satisfies the bounder instinct in you. I satisfy your instinct for show-girls. I'm one to you now, being pinched."

"God, you can say the low-down to a man, Jennifer!"

"Funny, Berry, that I can say it to you so quietly. I'm all helped. Look, I can throw away my crutches. Note the way in which she carves her mutton chop until the bloody juices run, scoops up some baked potato and says, 'Pass the A-1 sauce.' I'm awfully afraid something has happened over this mutton chop, Berry. I'm out of love. I see you now in your true light. Perforce, villain, you're a family-man at heart. You're a Babbitt in sheik's clothing. I'm for you, but not after you."

"If a man did the square thing by you and himself, he'd turn you over his knee and spank you for making a continual fool of him, going and coming."

"That's all that is needed to give this occasion the truly heroic ending it deserves. I'm renouncing you, Barry, not—denouncing."

"Why the devil . . ."

"Is your kid all beety and underdone? Do his fingers twine around yours? . . ."

"Gad! a woman has got to be sure of herself to get away with that . . ."

"Does the sight of his crib warm the cockles of your heart? Why is it cockles are always warmed? . . ."

EASY NOBILITY

"Berry, there are little spangles all across your forehead. You're perspiring. Not nice. Hanky."

"God! I wouldn't treat a dog the way you're treating me."

"Neither would I. The husband-and-father technique applies to this case better than canine technique would."

"I'll go!"

"Berry, I'm for your kid—"

"I know you are. You're so damned for him that I strongly suspect you of being noble—"

"Maybe I am. But if that's true—it's such easy, incidental nobility—it's easy for me to want to play square by your youngster and your wife, Berry—chiefly because I've come to the conclusion that one good husband and father is worth more than a bounder."

"But, Jennifer—"

"But, Berry—"

"Damn it, Jennif! now that this has happened—maybe it is for the best."

"Maybe, nothing. Surely you mean. Here, Berry, my hanky. Wipe your forhead—it's damp—and pay our check. You'll be late for mother-in-law."

"That's my business."

"No, Berry. Thank God, now it's my business to see that you're not late for mother-in-law."

They drove uptown in his car, their fingers interlaced after an old fashion between them, his knee ingratiated against hers, but in a silence that began to embarrass.

"I say, Jennifer," he said, as they approached the Plaza. "I say—"

"Don't say, Berry," she said. "It would spoil the perfect thing that has happened between us. Wait until I've gone and then say 'Amen. Fini. Curtain.'"

She alighted, leaving him standing bareheaded and perspiring, as she ran up the hotel steps.

That was the night, after dinner and the benefit performance with Hartley Slocum, that Jennifer met, for the first time, the author of Port of Salute—a young man named Gratton Davies.

DAILY SHORT STORY

Habit

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Woman Loses Life's Savings In Fake Oil Stock

Charlie Naughton was about 14, a quiet little boy, not too strong.

His mother babied him.

Mrs. Naughton was a widow. She had just about enough left to live on, by saving, to put Charlie through college.

It was planned. She would have to scrimp. Charlie couldn't have as good clothes, as good things every way, as other boys, or else she couldn't make the college grade for him.

Already she was greatly disturbed.

Charlie was quiet about it. He longed for a bicycle. He liked to fish, he could play ball and do many things like that, despite being not overly strong. But there was no money to spare for bicycles and fishing tackle, baseball mitts and the like.

Charlie came in from school one day when a young man sat talking with his mother. He was talking quite earnestly and showing booklets and maps and speaking of "Gushers" and things like that.

Charlie watched the man from the other room as he sat back in the big leather chair that had been his father's favorite resting place.

WRITES INQUIRIES

Charlie tried to do his home work. He was sitting at the dining room table.

But somehow he couldn't keep his eyes from this man. He could see him plainly through the arch to the living room.

The man seemed to fascinate him, the way he talked, the way he leaned back at ease and the way he kept his hands employed.

After the man had gone Charlie asked, "What was he selling, mom?"

"Stock in some new oil wells out West, son."

Charlie returned to his home work and Mrs. Naughton sat down and read the folders, studied the maps and dreamed dreams of increasing her meager fortune to figures that would insure, without crimping and sacrifice, the education of her boy.

Mrs. Naughton decided to verify these letters from people who had written about their good fortune as a result of investing with this company.

It was the "Yellow Star Gushers, Inc."

And so Mrs. Naughton wrote and awaited the replies.

They came with pleasing promptness.

There were four of these replies—she had written to only four. Each one assured her of the veracity of this Mr. Smithson's statements. Each one had invested, and, within a year, had received in dividends alone three times their original investment. One of the writers was a woman.

This decided Mrs. Naughton.

APPLIES FOR JOB

Leaving only enough of her little fortune for emergencies, Mrs. Naughton invested in the Yellow Star Gushers, Inc.

She awaited results.

There were no results.

Pleading letters that only half hid her frenzy of mind brought replies that there had been difficulties in the way of rock formations, that the work was progressing slowly and it might mean another six months before the investors began to get any returns.

Mrs. Naughton cried a great deal and Charlie went about from home to school and back, very quiet indeed, and very unhappy.

Mrs. Naughton went to work in a local millinery shop. She gave up the pretty apartment and she and Charlie lived in a cheap little three-room place with no playgrounds near, nothing but dirty hot streets and cemented areaways.

He was sitting out in the areaway one Saturday afternoon.

His mother had to work until 11 Saturday night. Charlie would go upstairs a little later and get dinner for her, for she would have only an hour and then have to go back to the shop.

Charlie was cheerful when she came. He told about a story in a book he had from the library, he talked about many things, but his mother suddenly cried.

It was about the Yellow Star Gushers, Inc. There had been such a company, but it was only a fake company. They had never struck oil. Certain confederates wrote the glowing letters. The clever talking Mr Smithson was a crook! The authorities wanted him but he had gone. It was all in the papers.

Charlie Naughton went down into the financial district. He went to seven places looking for work. He had read about office boys in brokerage offices. In the seventh place the man asked him if he intended to become a second J. P. Morgan.

Charlie shook his head.

"Mother lost her money in a fake oil stock company. I've got to work and I want to learn how not to be taken in like that," Charlie answered.

He got the job.

It was great. He got out by 5 o'clock. He could get home early.

There was a scene. Mother was home with a headache. Where had he been?

Charlie told her. There was more of a scene.

INVESTS SAVINGS

"I've got to do it. I want to do it—I'm going to do it. Thousands of men manage to get rich without going to college. Mr. Barnes told me more men down in Wall street with fortunes never went to college than successful men who did," Charlie said, quietly.

"You talk just like your father," sobbed Mrs. Naughton.

Charlie stuck to the job.

At Christmas he got $200.

The next Christmas, Charlie was helping the order clerks and often substituting. He received $600. He promptly made his mother give up working in the millinery shop because his salary was then $40.

They remained in the same cheap quarters another year. Then Charlie made her move.

The money he got this Christmas he invested.

He had been studying, watching, and when Mr. Barnes bought JQT, Charlie did the same, and his thousand dollars in March, had become twelve thousand.

He became a partner. He seemed to be a born financier.

Mr. Barnes died. Charlie became head of the company and took in a partner who had been begging to get in.

By the time the big crash came Charlie was 35, and engaged to a very charming girl. He and his mother lived in a pent house and a certain amount of money was given to his mother. He also had certain safe amount tucked away.

Charlie was one of the few who saw things get topheavy.

He sat tight. He warned a few good old customers.

During the hectic time when pedestrians had to look out for the speculators who were jumping out of windows, word came that John Seabright was on the "verge."

John Seabright was a very snooty sort. He was decidedly high hat. Charlie had never met him. Charlie had invited him to a business dinner once. Seabright's secretary telephoned and turned it down quite ungraciously.

Now Mr. Seabright wanted to see Mr. Charles Naughton.

To his secretary (Seabright's) Charlie said, "Certainly. Send him over. Tell him I think I can pull him through all right."

REMEMBERS HABIT

Mr. Seabright came into Charlie's office.

He explained the situation. If Charlie would put up some securities for him he would tide over this second market flop and it would save a great deal of calamity.

Mr. Seabright sat back in the chair and clicked coins from one hand to another as he talked, back and forth, back back and forth.

"Well," Seabright said, "that's it and your help will save me."

"If I don't help you—you're sunk—wiped out?"

"Yes. But you'll pull me through, Mr. Naughton."

He was still clicking the coins back and forth in his hands.

"Habit," said Charlie, "is a peculiar and interest thing. Your clicking those coins there, for instance. Habit gives a man away."

Charlie sat up and glared at him.

"By the way, Smithson, when did you change your name, and how's Yellow Star Gushers these days?"

Seabright—Smithson—blustered ineffectively.

"You sat in my mother's home when I was 14, you talked glibly, you clicked coins back and forth, back and forth in your hands, and you robbed her of her last penny, of the money that was to send me to college. You may get the hell out of the door or jump out of the window, it's immaterial to me," Charlie said.

The Seabright failure and Seabright's suicide were added sensations down in the market district.

The fact that Seabright's name was really Smithson and that he had acquired his start, financially, with fake stock companies, made still another sensation.

Charlie told his mother.

"Too bad," she said, but she shed no tear, and added, "Imagine you remembering that habit all these years — it was that habit that proved to be his nemesis."

WANTED: A Prosperity Loan!

The proposal by William Randolph Hearst for a $5,000,000,000 peace-time PROSPERITY LOAN tests the character and resourcefulness of the American people.

It emphatically raises the question whether this nation is capable of idealistic co-operation only for purposes of war and destruction.

In the last war, the United States raised $20,000,000,000 through Liberty Loan and Victory Loan campaigns.

These funds were employed largely to finance mutilation—to accomplish the pitiless destruction of life and limb.

William James, who was one of America's greatest philosophers, if not the greatest, astutely pointed out that agitation against war would be futile and academic until the people found a moral equivalent for war.

In his radio address last week, Mr. Hearst stirred the imagination of the American people by proposing a MORAL EQUIVALENT FOR WAR IN A GREAT PROGRAM OF SOCIAL RECONSTRUCTION LOOKING FORWARD TO THE RESTORATION OF PROSPERITY.

Instead of continuing a policy of drifting which condemns more than 5,000,000 unemployed to continued suffering and malnutrition, the publisher urges that the unprecedentedly vast capital resources of this country be tapped for socially desirable and humane uses.

The funds which would be raised through the sale of long-term United States government bonds would finance ESSENTIAL AND ECONOMIC FEDERAL PUBLIC works, including projects for internal waterways and power developments.

To do these urgently desirable things now when labor is in surplus supply would be doubly useful, for it would restore the buying power of the consumer public and thus in time generate the forces of a new and saner prosperity.

The oversubscription seven and a half times of the government $800,000,000 18-year 3⅛ per cent bonds shows that investable funds are available at call.

It is futile to speak of the responsibility of private initiative at a time when investors will buy in large quantities only gilt-edged bonds, such as United States government obligations, but will not take sufficient quantities of second grade issues, such as private corporations issue.

Unquestionably, the federal Treasury enjoys the highest credit in the world today.

The issue is whether this credit is to remain merely a source of senseless gloating, or whether it is to be turned to the SERVICE of the American people at this time of economic emergency.

It would be far more glorious to spend one-fourth of the sum raised by bond issues during the great war for the magnificent purposes of peace and social advancement.

Moreover, from a purely business standpoint, the proposed $5,000,000,000 spent on public improvements under a carefully planned program would be returned many times to the American people in USEFUL SERVICES AND TRADE PROMOTION, whereas the expenditures for war are frittered away forever.

THE CHOSEN LEADERS AT WASHINGTON HAVE VACILLATED WHEN DECISIVE ACTION WAS NEEDED.

The time has come for the American people to notify their political servants what they want.

A State Flower

The Campaign to Elect a Floral Emblem for Pennsylvania Can Be of Educational Value.

The Legislature adopted the ruffed grouse as the state bird.

At a previous session the House voted in favor of the hemlock as the state tree.

But Pennsylvania has no state flower. It is the only state that lacks one. So it is gratifying to note among the measures enacted in the closing days of the recent session, at a time when the congestion of business was such that many important bills failed to receive much attention, a resolution calling for the appointment of a State Flower Commission.

Representative Musmanno, author of the resolution, will be a member of the commission. A vote is to be taken among the public school pupils, and it is Mr. Musmanno's plan to visit the schools throughout Pennsylvania and talk to the children about it.

Some years ago Pittsburgh school children voted in favor of the blossom of the tulip poplar as our state flower. But nothing came of the proposal, and in the meantime Indiana has adopted that as its state flower. Pittsburgh club women once voted in favor of the trailing arbutus, but that has been pre-empted by Massachusetts.

As the last of the 48 states to choose an emblem our choice is limited. But we still have an abundance of native wild flowers from which to select without duplicating the choice of another state.

The campaign can be used to arouse interest in our flora, and to instill in the children appreciation of the beauty of nature.

Coal Police Brutality

Pittsburgh Coal Company's Men Are Again Accused of Abuse of Authority.

The riots in the coal strike are sickening in their senselessness.

Not the slightest benefit can come from violence.

The strikers will injure their cause and alienate public good-will if they attack miners who are unwilling to quit work. If miners desire to work for wages that the strikers consider too low, they have a right to.

On the other hand the operators will, if wise, refrain from attacking the strikers. Public opinion is already highly inflamed against the coal companies in the Pittsburgh district because of the brutality of their hirelings, the coal and iron police. The prudent course for the companies would be to let the state police take care of the situation.

Coal and iron police of the Pittsburgh Coal Company are accused of another wanton assault on unoffending citizens. They are said to have dragged two miners from an automobile in the public highway, to have beaten them and to have imprisoned them in a lockup on the company's property. In some respects the case resembles that of John Borkowski, who was beaten to death by Pittsburgh Coal Company policemen.

District Attorney Park would do well to investigate this latest accusation against the coal and iron police.

Gov. Pinchot has promised to cancel the commissions of all coal and iron police by July 1.

He may save the lives of Western Pennsylvania coal miners by canceling them immediately.

Marry-Go-Round

Tune In on These

"Plantonic friendship," these days, means that you've only let the man kiss you for a few hours every evening just to brighten up his summer.

Middle age is the point at which you can't quite decide whether to take a man's "flattering nothings" as a joke, an insult or a compliment.

The old-fashioned girl had a hard time trying to avoid doing anything that would get her talked about; the modern girl, poor thing, has a harder time trying to do something sufficiently new and startling to get herself talked about.

The kind of a man who will never admit his faults is not half so hard to live with as the kind who never stop bragging about them.

If you are looking for happiness, don't marry a man before his character has jelled, his youthful conceit has been boiled down, and his heart has stopped doing flip-flops.

You can usually spot a good husband by the worn edges of his pockets and his habit of looking at his watch.

Many a man's library is filled with unread books, that he bought because the little saleswoman had "that kind of eyes"—and an old mother or a baby to support.

The average man's habits are like potato bugs; you can't eradicate them; you can't ignore them. You've just got to learn to love 'em.

Love is an emotion, about which most men are curious at 20, critical at 30, cynical at 40—and charmingly credulous at 50.

* * *

Women's frocks are getting back to the normal waistline; but the men have been fooled so long by the constantly moving waistline that they probably won't remember how to embrace a girl in one of these.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Pastel

Day's end; above the river
The pallid cloud-wreaths drift,
The drooping willows shiver,
The foam-flecked ripples lift.

Pearl-pale, the sunset dying
In lavender and rose;
With dim mist-banners flying
The opal river flows.

Day's end; the far clouds yonder,
Once vivid with the light,
Mere ghosts of color wander
Into the realms of night.

Soft tints, like music fading
'Till silence reigns at last,
Into the dusk are fading,
Now that the day is past.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, June 9.—New York is not experiencing the usual summer desolation. Those who, as a rule, are at this time enjoying the breeze-swept verandas of their country places are remaining in town. And seasonal European voyagers are not voyaging. Liners shove off one-third filled.

It is, of course, a part of the economic adjustment and everybody is hopeful of returning to their routine by next summer. The biggest blow has fallen on tradesmen in smaller villages and the various gasoline filling stations. Road houses are empty.

One thing is fairly certain. Rents for summer homes will be lower next year. They were mounting so rapidly that only the elect could become tenants. A dinky house on the edge of a swamp with leaky garage and a seedy back street decadence cost a fortune for the season.

Yet Long Island real estate will suffer no permanent slump, experts say. It is the logical area for a great city's natural expansion. It affords a wealth of scenery and even a primitive wildness. There are still deer running at large on Long Island.

Once the section was overrun with Indians. The last big chief went to his happy hunting ground at Montauk Point 60 years ago. But there remain a few Indians. Most of them, however, are half caste, interbred with Negroes. From the past comes a thick stubble of unpronounceable names. Such as Mineola, Massapequa, Montauk, Quogue, Shagwong, Shinnecock, Canoe Place, Seawanaka, Seyauket, Amagansett, Patchogue, Cutchogue, Peconoic and Ronkonkoma. Long Island residential sections are known mainly as the North Shore and the South Shore—with North as the swankiest.

Between the two shores is the Great South Bay, the "great" is a rather comic—a shallow expanse of marshland, squirming with jellyfish. In the fall it attracts duck shooters. It is predicted that in 50 years Long Island will be as densely populated as Manhattan.

In a scene between Al Jolson and a titled Englishman, Jolson addresses him as Your Grace. But when the titled gentleman pulls a handkerchief from his cuff Jolson inquires: "May I call you just Grace?"

Herbert Bayard Swope, once a newspaperman himself, is reported to have passed up the ponies, temporarily at least. Mr. Swope is one of the few reporters to achieve a Long Island villa, a duplex in town and other doodads of the comfortably rich. His diversion has been afternoons at the track where as an occasional plunger he was quite lucky. But lately he was not so fortunate. "The horses I backed," he said, "seemed to run out of sheer curiosity. They just wanted to see if the other horses had tails."

Since coming to New York I have been overwhelmed by an O. Henry obsession to find a "man-about-town." So far he has been a figment of fiction. It is possible he existed in early Roman days, a care free dilettante who plunged daily at the Roman thermae, wagered on gladiators and gazed at life through the red of a wine glass. But he has no prototype today. At prize fights, races and sundry sporting events there are men who from all appearances seem the real thing. They know everybody, squire a new and different damozel almost every evening, are well barbered and clothed with a fastidious nicety. You imagine they are familiar with wine cards, the European capitals, the intricacies of the stock market and the reigning stage stars. But upon investigation you find that while they are likable fellows they are usually brokerage clerks, proprietors of small haberdasheries or cement salesmen. Men who are at their posts of duty all day long and firm disciples of the philosophy of Elbert Hubbard.

This column needs something bright about here to perk it up. It's flopping all over the place. And about the only thing I can think of even mildly amusing is the crack of Joe Laurie, Jr., that things are so tough at his house the mice are giving themselves up to the cat.

A NEW UNIVERSE MAKER

By Archibald Henderson

An interesting theory of the origin of the solar system has been put forward by Prof. Harold Jeffreys, the English scientist. It has many features to recommend it and is already coming in for wide notice. Like the tidal theory, it is based on a bi-parental origin. Aud Buffon, in the eighteenth century, put forward the germ idea on which this theory is based.

The tidal theory likewise has a bi-parental conception back of it. But it assumes the near passage of sun and star, rather than an actual collision of the two with each other. Such a collision, according to the Jeffreys theory, is supposed to have occurred very far back in time, say 2,000,000 years ago—a sort of maximum for geological time.

In the new theory, the force of fluid friction is added to all the forces estimated to exist in the tidal action theory. The trouble with the tidal theory was that it was in violation of the known facts regarding the periods of the planets. The rotation of the planets, under this tidal theory, would be about the same as that of the sun. But this, unfortunately, is not the case. The sun rotates in 25 days, for example, whereas Jupiter takes only 10 hours for its rotation. This discrepancy is believed to spell the ruin of the tidal theory.

The question, whose solution is sought by Jeffreys, is: How shall this difficulty regarding rotation be met? Jeffreys points out that when there is a sharp boundary between two fluids moving with different velocities, rotation takes place. If our star actually collided with the sun and a layer of separation between them was formed, a difference of velocity of 400 kilometers per second between the two sides is presumed. The collision would soon be over—say in an hour; but it would be long enough to set up the required rotation. As the star left the sun, it would drag along with it the transition layer, which would form a long ribbon-shaped strip. This would, in the process of emergency and stretching, break up into pieces.

Jeffreys has subjected his assumption to three quantative tests. And these tests the theory has withstood with very considerable success. Knowing the law of fluid friction, it is possible to compute necessary thickness of the intervening layer. Its mass would have to be about one-five-hundredth of that of the sun; and this is, roughly, the total mass of the planets.

In the second place, if this amount of matter formed a single spherical body, it would rotate in about eight hours, which is sufficiently near the periods of the great planets.

Furthermore, it has been computed that the turning force exerted on the sun by this mass would make the sun itself rotate with a period of about 30 days, which is only 20 per cent off and quite near enough to make the theory plausible.

According to this theory, satelites were formed at the same time as the planets. But just what the mechanism of that formation was is not yet clear.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Feel in the mood to tackle a questionnaire? Ranny Dalton submits a lively one.

Ranny's thirty-three, pretty well fixed, all ready to make some nice girl a good husband. But WHICH nice girl—there's the question. So he's been looking the field over. Plenty to choose from—plenty willing to be chosen. As far as Ranny is concerned, the useless ones and the sporty ones are out—as wives. The rest seem to fall into two classes—

There's the Nice Home Girl, who has never worked outside the home. She's a fine housekeeper . . . refined and reliable . . . likes to cook and embroider . . . belongs to a Thursday bridge club . . . dresses smartly . . . entertains well . . . plays a little golf . . . appreciates a good book and show . . . is sufficiently intelligent, affectionate and good natured.

Then there's the Business Girl. She's been out in the man's world since she graduated from High School. She knows man ways, shares man interests. She's handsome, well groomed, smart, quick, punctual and wonderfully efficient—in her line. But her line ISN'T housework.

She doesn't like housework. She frankly states that she thinks it's an economic waste for a bright woman to coop herself up in a kitchen. She would love to have a home and children, but she would always insist on hiring experts to care for them—and on earning the money to pay for those experts.

She'd love as deeply as the Home Girl. But, on the other hand, she wouldn't be as unquestioning, as amiable or patient. She'd call a man's bluff, despite his decisions . . . keep him up on his toes, professionally. She'd be more inspiring and stimulating, but—to most men—not as restful or flattering as the Home Girl.

A man could be proud of her. But perhaps he couldn't be as sure of her. Having worked with many men, she might want to keep them as friends. She certainly wouldn't permit even the best loved husband to monopolize her or dominate her.

As a comrade, she'd be grand. But as a Dear Little Woman, she'd probably be an awful flop.

So here's what Ranny wants to know — WHICH OF THESE TYPES WOULD MAKE THE BETTER WIFE?

The woman who knows nothing of the working world . . . whose interests are concentrated on her home and family . . . who will never talk shop, nor understand it . . . who may irritate by her jealousy but who will also flatter by her helplessness and innocence.

Or the woman who is part of the man's world . . . whose interests range, with his, outside the home . . . who will insist on talking shop and possibly make a better record than his, as a worker . . . who will be more broad-minded but also more independent.

WHICH WOMAN WOULD MAKE THE BETTER LIFE COMPANION? AND WHICH WOULD MAKE THE BETTER MOTHER?

Is the idealistic, sentimental, untrained and inexperienced woman a better guardian for a man's babies—or the practical, experienced woman of the world?

Tell Ranny. He wants to know.

Mystery Overawes Ignorance

It Only Amuses Those That Can Think.

THIS SAVAGE KING'S FACE MUST NEVER BE SEEN.

Great is the power of mystery on the ignorant human mind. Ancient pagan religions relied on mysterious rites, mysterious mumblings, mysterious images to control the superstitious masses.

In one place a great idol was built so that when the sun went down there was a loud moaning from the stone image. That impressed the people, who brought abundant offerings to the priests of that idol.

They could not explain the mystery, but it was simple. Inside the image the air was heated during the daytime. As the sun set and the air grew colder, the hot air rushed out, and caused the moaning.

The ancient Sibyls, seers and fortune tellers before and since the famous "Witch of Endor" worded their utterances mysteriously.

And they did it wisely so that no matter what happened they might pretend that they had predicted it.

This picture shows the force of mystery still great among those that do not think.

You see the high and mighty West Africa native ruler, Shyanbola Ladgbolu, seated on his throne with his ministers and courtiers around him.

He is the Alifin, which means "king," of Oyo, in Nigeria, and must never allow his face to be seen in public, always appearing as you see him here, closely veiled with heavy strings of beads coming down before his face.

On one side a courtier holds his scepter, his advisers are near him, the agent of the British Empire in immaculate white sits nearby, no veil on his face, he wants to see everything.

The King's Diviner, not seen in this picture, sits cross-legged on the ground, his back to the King, his powerful eye directed outward, toward anybody that might come. The "Diviner" is supposed to have the power of warding off evil influences, including the "evil eye," which savages still fear, and which many Christian races dreaded in ancient days, when they believed that the basilisk could kill, with a glance of its eye, and that some human beings had the power, with a glance, to cause great misfortune.

The Nigerian Alifin, according to the British agent, is unusually enlightened, for an African ruler. He knows that the beads he wears in front of his face don't amount to anything. But he knows, also, that his subjects attach great importance to them.

They say to themselves: "What a marvelous creature our King must be. Doubtless he covers up his face because one look from his magnificent eyes would paralyze and destroy us."

The Alifin looks very much like any other native of Nigeria, possibly better fed and fatter, but with no other important difference.

But his royal dress, his heavy veil of beads, and the extreme politeness with which the agent of the British Empire treats him, while communicating Britain's orders, impress the Alifin's subjects immensely.

This picture is interesting as illustrating how childhood, whether it be the adult childhood of superstitious savages, or real childhood, among civilized beings, clings to, and enjoys, mystery.

Children have their secret clubs, their passwords, their strange languages, "hog latin," etc. Half grown children, in colleges, have their secret societies, with mystic Greek letters. They, also, are still children.

But with the savages, as with the ancients, mystery goes farther, and plays a part in every day of their lives, and in every important function, from birth to death.

Of all mysteries, the greatest of all are BIRTH AND DEATH, and those mysteries still puzzle us all, the foolish and the wise. In time, we shall all know that there is nothing mysterious back of them; it will all be clear enough. We shall know that as well as we know that there is nothing remarkable back of King Shyanbola's beads.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

How do you treat the man on the street who asks you for money?

If it is your policy to refuse, how do you do it?

Turn him down with an angry rebuff?

Wouldn't it be just as easy to speak in a kindly manner?

At times when there is plenty of work, sympathy and kindness is wasted on those who panhandle.

It is right, in those circumstances, to suggest that the beggar WORK.

But how many who are begging are not lazy—they can't get work.

The man who is willing to work, can't find it, and is often compelled to solicit alms or starve, is to be pitied, not censured.

The very least you can do is to treat him kindly.

Perhaps you have never known what it is to be without food and a place to sleep and no prospect of getting money for these necessities.

If you had had such an experience you might be more sympathetic.

It is a disturbing thought to know that a few cents from one of many well fed citizens who pass would relieve a craving for food, and to realize that if you should solicit even a small sum your request would be angrily refused.

You can at least give a kind word to the man who asks you for aid.
